Bare Handful of Major Bills Failed to Receive Approval of Legislature

Outstanding Setbacks to Administration Came With Defeat of Reapportionment and Child Labor in the Lower House.

BETTING FIGHT

Democratic Party Charged With Failure to Solve the Problem of Real Estate Taxation.

Albany, N. Y., April 20 (AP).—A bare handful of major bills failed to receive the stamp of approval of the 1935 Legislature.

The outstanding setbacks to the administration came with the defeat of the legislative and congressional reapportionment measures and ratification of the federal child labor amendment. They were killed in the lower house as Democrats and Republicans joined in assailing them.

A constitutional amendment to legalize pari-mutuel betting, approved by the 1934 Legislature, ran into an unexpected wave of opposition in the Senate and was swamped in the closing days of the session. For weeks prior to the vote there were reports on the hill that a $250,000 slush fund had been formed by bookmakers to fight pari-mutuels but senators scoffed at the rumors as they registered their opposition.

An old visitor, proposal to legalize lotteries, made an annual appearance under the guise of an unemployment relief bill but failed to get beyond committee doors. Another perennial proposal, mandatory jury service for women, blossomed in the Assembly but was promptly crushed in the upper house.

Defeat of a bill to limit the tax on real estate to two per cent brought a charge by Senator George R. Fearon, Republican minority leader, that the Democratic party "made no attempt whatever to solve the problem of real estate taxation."

The New York city investigation of the TERA reverberated in the Legislature and a resolution was introduced for a state-wide investigation of the handling of unemployment relief funds. It ended in a committee waste basket.

A group of crime bills sponsored by Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., were smothered in committee while the Senate failed to approve the Taylor bill to legalize the payroll status of a group of civil service workers. The bill, passed by the Assembly, empowered the civil service commission to legalize numerous reclassifications of civil service titles. The Appellate Division recently ruled the commission did not have this authority.

Other bills which were killed included: State regulation of taxicabs, to require students in state supported colleges to swear allegiance to the constitution to pave the way for tolls on the state barge canal, to eliminate jury exemptions and to liberalize the state's divorce laws.

Must Participate.

Moscow, April 20 (AP).—The government's organ, Izvestia, said today Germany must participate in security agreements rather than just recognize them. It said an attempt on Germany's part at expansion through violence is a danger "hanging ominously over the world."

Benedictine Ball Monday Evening

All is now in readiness for the big Easter Monday ball to be given at the Municipal Auditorium, that is the annual charity ball of the Benedictine Hospital. The officers and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary are very happy over the fact that the list of patrons given in Friday evening's issue of The Freeman was a larger one than that of last year.

There is still one more attraction for the splendid program preceding the dancing, which has not been announced. Mrs. Loughran having just received a telegram stating that Raymond, Frances and Decarlos, delightful adagio sensationalists from Radio City Music Hall, a ballroom trio, will be added to the list of stellar performers for Monday evening. They will specialize in the "Blue Danube."

As usual an attractive reception room on the floor of the Auditorium will be arranged where the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Edward Loughran, and the first vice president, Miss Mary F. Campbell, together with the following past presidents: Mrs. John N. Cordis, Mrs. Thomas J. Hickey, Mrs. Jean Dwyer Goldrick, Mrs. Frank L. Eastman, Mrs. C. L. Gannon, Mrs. James J. Jenkins, Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, Mrs. N. D. J. Murphy and Mrs. Walter C. Miller, will receive the guests of the evening.

Judge Harry E. Schirick will open the ball and welcome the guests in the name of the Benedictine Hospital, and Conrad J. Heidelman will, as the mayor of the city, extend an official greeting.

At 8 o'Clock, Etne's broadcasting orchestra will give a half hour concert after which the elaborate and exceedingly interesting program will begin at 8:30 o'clock, promptly, so that dancing may begin as nearly at 9 o'clock as possible.

Hitler's Birthday Gift to Self Is Indignant Protest to Powers

German Ambassadors and Ministers to Present Strong Note to Respective Foreign Offices of Nations Condemning Nazi Abrogation of Treaty of Versailles—League of German Civil Servants Presents a Million Marks to Adolf for Military Purposes.

Vast Difference In Observance of Easter

New York, April 20 (AP).—Vast will be the difference as Easter is observed in Park avenue penthouses and First avenue flats.

Lester Smith, 17, faces the day in jail. He is charged with stealing a customer's coat from a tailor shop and having it shortened so that his mother could have an Easter garment. Now the mother has neither coat nor son to brighten the day.

Rose Rago, her only employment in five years the care of her family's motherless flat, listened to her friends' enthusiastic descriptions of new hats and dresses. She will be here tomorrow only because a policeman knew an emergency antidote for poison.

Easter won't be as bad as it might for John Kolononski, 17-year-old bootblack who was caught stealing two boxes of Easter candy. The sweets were for his six brothers and sisters, John said, and the candy factory owner refused to prosecute.

In the Rockefeller Center shop of Alexander Schaffer, Park avenue patrons may buy Easter eggs. The prices range from $6 to $7,000 an egg.

The eggs are wrought from precious metals and studded with rare jewels. They are made by a master craftsman and given by Czar Nicholas II to members of his family. One presented to Empress Alexandra, for example, is a trinket valued at $4,500.

Berlin, April 20 (AP).—An indignant protest to the powers represented on the League of Nations council was Reichsfuehrer Hitler's gift to himself, the nation and the foreign powers today on the occasion of his forty-sixth birthday.

This protest was to be handed by the German ambassadors and ministers to the respective foreign offices at the capitals of the various nations during the course of the day and was to be given out for publication in Germany at 5:30 p. m., Berlin time.

Hitler himself remained most of the morning at the chancellery. A few minutes after eleven o'clock General Werner Von Blomberg, defense minister visited Derfuehrer to thank him for restoring conscription to the nation. Twenty minutes later an honor company of the Reichswehr (German army) marched by under a youthful chief commander.

Nature of Note Withheld.

Although the nature of the protest was withheld in Berlin before its publication, political circles generally expressed the opinion that it lays emphasis on the fact Germany rejects the establishment of a new "guilt lie."

Not only did the press emphasize Germany's return to militarism as a cause for celebrating Derfuehrer's birthday, but presents and messages emphasized this idea.

The League of German Civil Servants raised one million marks which was given to Hitler for "ertuechtigung," or in other words, for military purposes.

Ten brown-shirted storm troops were reported to have given a squadron of military planes.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the minister of propaganda, told the nation by radio on the leader's birthday that "the entire nation loves him because it feels safe in his hands like a child in its mother's arms."

The little cabinet officers said Hitler is fanatically possessed of the idea to save Germany and added that "Hitler sacrificed his happiness and his private life."

Italian Reaction.

Rome, April 20 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany in a strong note to Premier Mussolini today rejected "in the most resolute manner" the League Council's condemnation of his country.

He also challenged the right of the governments represented on the council to "make themselves judges over Germany," and characterized their deliberations as "a new discrimination."

The German note, delivered by Ulrich Von Hassel, the German ambassador, to the foreign ministry, was the long-awaited answer to the council's censure of the Reich for rearming in violation of the Versailles treaty.

The note rejects "in the most resolute manner" the council's deliberation and reserved the right to make known soon Germany's position with regard to the various questions touched upon by the council.

The text of the note which Ambassodor Von Hassel consigned to Baron Pompeo Aloisi, chief in the foreign ministry, follows:

"The German government contests to the governments which in the council of the League of Nations took in the deliberations of April 17 the right of making themselves judge over Germany. The government sees in the deliberation of the council of the league an attempt of new discriminations against Germany and therefore rejects it in the most resolute manner.

"The government reserves the right to make known soon her position on different questions touched upon in the deliberation."

Not Surprised.

Official and diplomatic circles were not surprised at the arrival of the note, since the reported reaction in Germany had led them to believe that some such course as rejection might be taken.

They were surprised, however, at the curt, sharp tone taken by the chancelior.

It was not believed here that the note requires an answer until after Hitler had stated his ideas upon the particular questions discussed during the council deliberations, as the note said the German government intended to do.

Hitler's note lent added weight to the widely expressed opinion that Germany will refuse to attend the conference of Danubian nations to be held here at the end of May as decided upon in the Stresa conference.

Closed by Police

New York, April 20 (AP).—The Nudist Theater Guild's widely heralded play, "The Girl from Childs," has been closed by police. The trouble wasn't the nudity. The actors and actresses wore breechcloths or panties. The hitch even had a shirtfront. License Commissioner Moss said the play could not be continued in the Sutton Theatre because the seats were not screwed to the floor and there was no asbestos curtain.

Gorman Suffers Rock Throwing Mania And Wrecks 5 Windows

Newkirk Avenue Youth Indulges In Too Much Alcoholic Stimulant And Hurls Rocks Through Store Windows.

Peter Gorman, 24, of 57 Newkirk avenue, was placed under arrest by Special Officer Charles Messinger at 5:20 o'clock this morning, after he had finished wrecking five windows in business places downtown. The charge lodged against Gorman was one of public intoxication. Later in police court Gorman told Judge Culloton that he understood he had broken a number of windows and was willing to make good the damage he had caused. For that reason, on his plea of guilty to public intoxication, imposing of a sentence was deferred until April 27, and he was warned by the court to remain sober during that period. Gorman wrecked the windows by hurling a stone through them.

According to the police the youth confessed to breaking the window in the store of Abram Bahl at 92 Broadway, but said he could not remember breaking the other windows. Other business places whose windows were wrecked were the Kingston Laundry, the store of Max Jacobson, the First National Bank and Barnowitz, corner of East Union and Chambers street.

Several of the business men whose windows were wrecked were at police headquarters this morning. The damage to the windows was estimated at well over a hundred dollars.

Arrested for Speeding.

Joseph Natoli of RFD No. 2, arrested by Motorcycle Officer Barmann on a charge of speeding 40 miles an hour on Albany avenue, was fined $10 on his plea of guilty.

Officer Barmann also arrested Millard Davis of the Saugerties road on a charge of speeding 50 miles an hour on Albany avenue. The case was set down for a hearing on Tuesday.

Two Changes in Route Numbering Here

There are two changes in the route numbering of the state road system which affect Ulster county.

Former State Route 279 from Kingston through Ellenville and Wurtsboro to Port Jervis is eliminated and is now Federal Route U. S. 209 between the same points and continuing into Pennsylvania.

Present State Route 55 from Poughkeepsie through Highland, Minnewaska, Kerhonkson and Grahamsville is retained and is also Federal Route U. S. 44 between Poughkeepsie and Kerhonkson only where at joins Route U. S. 209. State Route 55 continuing on to Napanoch, Montela and Liberty.

Repercussions Feared In Election Campaign Over Relief Disputes

PEOPLE BLAMELESS

Recipients of Relief Are Those Who Should Not Suffer, Says Georgia Representative.

Washington, April 20 (AP) — The capital wondered today if the flaring disputes involving relief and work money might not have repercussions in the 1935 election campaign.

Political battles to come were foreshadowed plainly, some observers said, by latest developments in the New Deal's controversies with Senator Huey P. Long and Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

President Roosevelt's assertion yesterday that he was trying to keep politics out of relief, and the charge by Senator Hastings (R., Del.) that the administration is "playing politics with relief," gave an indication of the direction which future campaign clashes might take. Hastings contended the government is denying aid to persons who do not subscribe to its policies.

Governor Talmadge of Georgia, whose connection with the administration of federal relief funds in his state was severed after he had described the President as " a radical of the extreme form," showed no signs of relaxing his opposition to the Roosevelt government.

"The federal government has undertaken to provide relief," commented Representative Castellow, Georgia Democrat, "and I think it is the opinion of our congressional delegation that the needy of our state should not be visited with punishment because of a controversy between federal officials and our state officials."

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, has threatened to cut off federal money from states failing to contribute what he considers a fair share toward a fund to support unemployables who will not benefit from the government's $4,000,000,000 work relief appropriation.

Open defiance continues to be the answer of Senator Long and his associates in Louisiana to the threat of Secretary Ickes to withhold public works funds if the state legislature gives Long control over them.

The legislation which would give the senator power over virtually all federal outlays in the state moved forward yesterday, and a direct reply to Ickes was dispatched last night by A. P. Tugwell, chairman of the Louisiana highway commission.

Tugwell telegraphed the secretary of the interior that the highway commission was not interested in construction of a proposed $7,000,000 rail-highway bridge at Baton Rouge if the Public Works administration insisted on being in charge of the project. He scoffed at Ickes' threat of a federal investigation.

Six other states were listed at relief headquarters, meanwhile, as having failed to give Relief Administrator Hopkins satisfactory assurance that they will contribute the amout of relief which he expects from them in the next 12 months. These states were Tennessee, Florida, North and South Carolina, Virginia and New Jersey.

Fish Was Barred.

New York, April 20 (AP)—Barred from delivering a radio speech over station WHN last night, Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, charged the action was a "concrete and definite example of the radio censorship which people have been talking about for a long time, but which they have been unable to substantiate with evidence." Fish charged he was prevented from delivering the address because he proposed to denounce what he termed an attempt to "gerrymander" upstate Republican districts. A Republican, he declared he had been invited by the station several weeks ago to speak on the general subject of the new deal.

Boards Plane

Rome, April 20 (AP).—Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg of Austria boarded a plane today en route back to Vienna after his conferences with Premier Mussolini, reportedly concerning restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty in Austria.

Social Security Bill Runs Into Jam Today As Senate Threatens Delay

Republicans Admit "Off-the-Record" That They Had to Vote for Bill To Avoid "Political Suicide."

BONUS HEARINGS

Harrison Hopes to Get Measure Out of Committee and Then Turn to Recovery Legislation.

Washington, April 20 (AP)—Swept through the House of Representatives by a lop-sided vote, the Roosevelt social security bill ran today into a legislative jam in the Senate which threatened long delay.

New attempts to write sweeping changes into the big bill—which is designed eventually to levy $2,783,000,000 or more in new taxes for financial help to the aged, jobless, children and mothers—also were in prospect.

The 372 to 33 vote which jammed the bill through the House yesterday was made possible by smooth functioning of the overwhelming Democratic machine and by the "ayes" of many Republicans who had lost their battle to delete the new taxes from the bill. Off-the-record, some the these Republicans said they had to vote for the whole bill on the fiual roll call to avoid "political suicide."

Fresh from this victory — which followed almost three months of dispute—the bill went to the Senate finance committee, already tied up in controversy over the cash bonus and NRA.

Chairman Harrison (D., Miss.) announced the security program would be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible, but said the bonus would be taken up by his committee first, and then the bill to extend NRA's life.

Hearings of the bonus bill have already been called for the first two days of next week. Harrison said he hoped to get it out of the committee by the middle of the week and turn to the recovery legislation.

Even the most optimistic administration friends of NRA concede, however, that it will take 10 days or two weeks to get that controversial issue settled in the committee and reported out to the Senate.

As passed by the House, the security measure touches on all the phases of "economic security" outlined in a message President Roosevelt sent to Congress January 17. However, in most cases the aid for the persons covered would materialize only if the states did something for them.

Two Kinds of Pensions

There are two kinds of old age pensions:

1. If a state has a satisfactory pension system for the aged needy over 65, the federal government will match what the state pays—up to $15 a month.

2. The second system applies to people working for salaries, commissions or income. On the first $3,000 earned annually, the worker may pay the federal government one per cent—beginning in January, 1937. Gradually, the tax increases to 3 per cent in 1949. The employer must match these tax payments, dollar for dollar. At 65 years of age, the worker gets what he has paid in, plus interest. For example, if a worker paid taxes for 20 years on a salary of $200 a month, his monthly pension would be $51.25.

As for unemployment insurance, each employer of 10 or more persons will pay a 1 per cent payroll tax beginning in 1936. If the employer's state has unemployment insurance, he may deduct from his payment to the federal government 90 per cent of what he pays the state. The measure is designed to induce the states to set up unemployment insurance systems. Most of the regulations for such systems, including the amount of benefits to workers, are left to the states.

In the case of child aid and the like, most of the money would be made available to the states only if they put up money of their own.

The unemployment insurance and the second system of old age pensions do not apply to farmers, domestic servants, casual workers, seamen and some other classes of workers.

STATE FOOD BUREUA WARNS AGAINST POISONOUS DYES

Albany, N. Y., April 20 (AP)—If you plan to tint eggs to eat on Easter be careful of poisonous dyes, the state bureau of food control warns.

The bureau announced that dozens of seizures of Easter egg dyes containing poison in the form of lead, turpentine and resin had been made in the Buffalo area and one in the Albany district.

The poisonous dyes, the bureau said, are easily recognized by an odor characteristic of paints, lacquers or varnishes. These dyes, it was said, are "extremely dangerous to health, although rarely fatal."

It was pointed out, however, that most of the dyes on the market are non-poisonous and perfectly safe. These are made with "permitted food dyes".

Held for Hearing.

Henry Judson, 42, of Highmount, was arrested Friday night by Trooper Dunn of Phoenicia and was committed to the Ulster county jail to await a hearing before Justice Theron E. Townsend of Shandaken on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Father and 7 Children Burned to Death in Home

St. Emile De Lorretteville, Que., April 20 (AP).—Alphonse Renaud and his seven children were burned to death in a summer cottage here today when a coal oil lamp exploded and set fire to the wooden structure. A servant girl was the only member of the household to survive the flames.

The family had just moved into the cottage last night and were not known here. The servant girl said Renaud was employed by a contractor in Quebec, and that Mrs. Renaud was ill in a Quebec hospital.

Renaud had rented the cottage for the summer season and brought his children out from the city, 12 miles away.

Early this morning, police said, the servant girl attempted to light the oil lamp but there was a sharp explosion and blazing oil spattered the wooden kitchen walls. The girl fled.

Neighbors were brought to the house by the servant, but Renaud and his seven children were trapped.

Volunteer fire-fighters could do nothing to subdue the fire, which burned out in a little over an hour. The charred bodies of the victims were recovered.

Federal Land Bank Makes Further Cut In Farm Loan Rate

Twice within a period of ten days the Federal Land Bank has voluntarily reduced the interest rate on all new farm mortgage loans, according to C. C. DuMond of Ulster Park, secretary of the Ulster National Farm Loan Association.

Effective April 10, all new Land Bank loans will be made at 4¼ per cent a year for the entire term of the loans, most of which are granted for 20 or 33 years. On April 1 a reduction to 4½ per cent was announced, bringing the rate down from 5 per cent which had been in force prior to that date.

The latest reduction was made possible through the ability of the Federal Land Bank, Springfield, Mass., to obtain funds for financing its loans by the sale of 3¼ per cent bonds, a recent issue of which was heavily over-subscribed, the announcement stated. The bank and the local farm loan associations through which loans are made are cooperative credit institutions operating under federal charters but under the control of local farmers.

In this locality, applications for loans are filed with the association which is required to give its approval and endorsement on each loan before the Land Bank can advance the funds. During the past 18 months, practically the entire amount of some $700,000.00 disbursed on loans in Ulster county was used to refinance and pay up old mortgages and other debts, the association's records reveal.

Loans Amortize Debts

Although payments on the principal of loans now being made or loans already granted are not required until July, 1938, the amortization plan of financing farm mortgages is followed by the Land Bank system. This plan calls for small semi-annual payments on the mortgage itself in addition to interest so that the loans are gradually paid off and become completely retired by the time the mortgages mature.

The Federal Land Bank of Springfield serves all of New England and New York and New Jersey. It operates through 147 National Farm Loan Associations and local correspondents through which loans have been made for more than $100,000,000 since the Bank was established in 1917. At the present time about two-thirds of the original amount of the loans is outstanding and represents mortgages on 26,000 farms.

Loans already granted by the Bank and Commissioner loans which are made at 5 per cent, are not affected by the recent reductions since they apply only to new loans. Land Bank loans already granted at higher rates, however, require only 4½ per cent interest until July, 1938.

All Ten Policemen Passed Radio Exams

Today's mail brought an Easter gift to each of the ten members of the Kingston police department in the form of a third class radio operator's license as the result of their having passed the recent examinations held at the city hall under the supervision of H. L. Van Deusen, secretary of the local civil service commission. Seven members of the department took the examination, which was also taken by Chief Wood and Sergeants Charles Phinney and James V. Simpson. The seven patrolmen who passed were Officers George Powers, James P. Martin, Fred Stoudt, Earl Schoonmaker, Frank Ferum, William J. Reardon and Ernest Bass.

POSSIBILITY OF RAIN IN EASTERN SECTIONS

Washington, April 20 (AP).—A promise of weather warm enough to bring out easter finery was coupled today with a warning that the new bonnets might get rained on in some sections.

The possibility of rain tomorrow was seen mainly in the eastern half of the country, the weather bureau said.

Considerable cloudiness and possibly rain were forecast for much of the territory east of the Mississippi. It was indicated, however, that the prevailing mild temperatures would not change much over Sunday.

For the north central states, the forecast was partly cloudy for today and tomorrow, with little if any rain expected and temperatures above normal considered likely. Mild weather in the middlewest generally was reported in prospect.

Six Young People Die in Auto Crash

Salisbury, Md., April 20 (AP).—Six young people, out on a joy-ride, were killed early today as their automobile crashed into a parked truck at Powellville, nine miles east of here.

Two were killed instantly and four died later in the Peninsula Hospital here without regaining consciousness. The wrecked machine had to be torn apart to extricate the bodies.

The victims were:

Thaddeus Dykes, 25; Morris M. Dykes, 22, and Wisehart Mumford, 19, of Salisbury.

Violet Templeton, 17, Evelyn Willey, 17, and Agnes Taylor, 20, of Delmar.

Corporal C. E. Minnick of the state police said the machine failed to negotiate a curve in the center of the village and crashed into the truck, which had been left parked on the street by Edwin Jones of Accomac, Va.

"The car must have been traveling at least 70 miles an hour," Minnick asserted after making a preliminary investigation. He said he found no eye-witnesses to the tragedy.

The victims were crushed inside the car by the force of the impact. The two Dykes were dead when villagers reached the car.

The sound of a crash awoke most of the residents of the village and they flocked to the scene to give any aid they could. The injured were taken in cars to the hospital.

Corporal Minnick said Thaddeus Dykes was taken from behind the steering wheel. The officer said his operator's license had previously been revoked by the state motor vehicle commissioner.

EASTER

"THE JUNIOR CHOIR FOLLIES" AT THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

Members of the Junior choi of the First Presbyterian Church will offer an evening of blues-chasing merriment Tuesday when they present "The Junior Choir Follies" in the parish house on Tremper avenue at 8 o'clock.

The scene is laid in a "tea-room" and from the first number of "Prologue" before the curtain, enacted by Robert Maresca and Marion DuBois, there will be no dull moments, it is promised. As the curtains part members of the cast are seen chatting at individual tables, but alternately they provide entertainment in songs and skits, tuneful popular songs and sly jokes on one another and, incidentally, on people in the audience.

A chorus with gyrations, "Tea for Two", is first presented, starring Janet Heard, supported by several members of the cast. This is followed by a mock tragedy, "The Magician", a skit written by Goodrich Gates, enacted by Jean DuBois, Robert Van Valkenburg and Leah Schultz.

Marjorie and Marion Bartlett next indulge in Rhythm and More Rhythm", after which the cast, seated at the tables, indulges in jokes and "gags" at the expense of all present. A dumb-bell act is then put on by Janet Schoonmaker. The first scene closes with a solo, "Whispering", by Betty Gibson.

After a short intermission, Edwin Schultz will interpret "Ev'ry Day", which act is interrupted by a small "newsie", John Forman, who is intimidated by the cast into reciting a doleful lament, "Is I Got to Go to School?" "Cy and Hy" ("the two Bobs", Maresca and Van Valkenburg) make a noisy entrance, create choking noises in the audience and make a still noisier exit. Jean Du Bois, Robert Van Valkenburg and George Anderson put on a musical argument, "I Won't Dance", French accent and all.

Helen Reese and George Anderson enter the stage next, just after the train has left which they intended to catch. In this skit they portray a "Mr. and Mrs." squabble accurately drawn from life. For the closing spectacle, the toes of cast and audience are set respectively twinkling and tingling with the tuneful chorus, "Lovin' Sam", featuring Edwina Schultz and Bob Maresca.

Other members of the cast are Alma Burger, Gertrude Chamberlain, Harry Flowers and Howard Fink. The first three are presented in the first number, "Tea for Two". Howard Fink interprets the role of a "wise-cracking" waiter. Miss Janet Evans is director and accompanist.

Prominent figures of the stage and society and persons active in the social and educational life of New York will meet at the annual luncheon of the League for Political Education on May 2nd at the Hotel Astor to discuss the question, "What the Theatre Means to Me."

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 20, 1935.

NO THIRTY-HOUR WEEK YET

If the National Industrial Conference Board, in its study of the proposed 30-hour working week, is correct in its conclusions, the result of adopting the Black bill in Congress would bring a very slight increase in number of workers employed, and would more than offset any advantage of that sort by raising the cost of manufactured goods and increasing prices and the cost of living to everybody. Accordingly, it is well that the Senate has turned down the bill. The economic philosophy represented in such drastic limitation of the working week is condemned by nearly all disinterested economists. It might hinder future prosperity. It goes straight against the economic philosophy most popular in this country today—the ideal of abundance.

Very likely we shall have a 30-hour week, or less, some time. But this is too early in the game to urge it, when not more than five per cent of the American people have anywhere near all the things they need, when 20 per cent of them are living on public charity, and most of those in between want better food, clothing, shelter and many other things.

Human fairness and social decency forbid anything like oppressively long work hours. But nothing of that kind is threatened today. The present need is a far greater production of goods, with fairer and wiser distribution of them.

INDUSTRIAL DISARMAMENT

With all this agitation and legislation about disarmament, in a military sense, how about industrial disarmament? If it is possible for nations to get along without fighting each other, it ought to be possible for domestic industries to do the same thing, keeping the peace and compromising their differences for mutual advantage.

We have really been doing this lately to a greater extent than usual. There have been rumors and threats of great strikes. Again and again an important industry was about to be prostrated by a "labor war". But hardly any of these disasters have occurred. When strikes have actually started, some way has usually been found to stop them or defer them, pending arbitration or some other form of settling the disputes.

Thus we really are making progress toward this form of disarmament. We shall make industrial peace more effective and secure when we have better machinery for it. New machinery is being established slowly but surely. And here, just as with international conflicts, the most important thing is the state of mind of the potential combatants. There must be on both sides, and also among the by-standers—the public—a definite "will to peace".

MOVABLE HOMES

If you can't rent a house, move it to some other town. This seems to be the moral to the story of a property-owner in Nevada. He had a vacant house in Fernley which persistently remained vacant. So he raised a little money in the form of a modernization loan and moved it to Reno, 50 miles away. He hadn't got the building settled on its new foundations before he had found a profitable tenant for it.

We're likely to have more of this sort of thing with the new "factory-built" houses, made in room-units and quickly assembled. They could be knocked down, carted to another town or to the country and set up again, all rather cheaply and with little damage. In fact, as this type of home develops, we may see restless owners traveling around almost like snails, with their homes on their backs.

BODYGUARDS

Percy L. Gassaway, cowboy congressman from Oklahoma, puts on a good show. In fact, he's a little Gridiron Club show by himself. His latest entertainment was a neat piece of work. Announcing "I ain't gonna be outdone by Long", Congressman Gassaway got him a personal bodyguard consisting of four boys, ranging in age from 7 to 14, three of them House pages and the youngest one of the eight little Gassaways. Armed with toy pistols, they strode heroically down the Capitol steps ahead of the Oklahoma statesman, amid a camera bombardment, and then, as a demonstration defying "Huey Long and the financial big shots," they popped their cap pistols and solemnly escorted their chief to his office.

There has been too much nervous tension at Washington. Senator Long's armed bodyguard itself is an illustration of the fact. Good-natured satire and parody may be more effective than any angry invective in correcting some of the things that need correcting in our public life.

STRATOSPHERIC TROUBLES

Wiley Post certainly has had bad luck with his stratosphere flights. He has failed three times to make a time record across the continent by using the thin upper air. First he had emery dust in his motor bearings. Then his oxygen supply failed. The last time, on April 14, it was a defective supercharger.

Wiley and his wonderful little plane, the Winnie Mae, will probably succeed yet in this pioneering effort. But these foiled flights have not been real failures at all. They have shown emphatically what a pilot is up against in such high altitudes and what perfection of motor, accessory parts and breathing equipment are necessary for such flying. It is a far more difficult game than navigating the lower air levels. Super-flying requires super-outfitting. It is well not to accomplish it too suddenly, lest inadequate knowledge, preparation and equipment should bring tragic disaster.

SLOW THYROID GLAND

I believe that health writers including myself talk so much about the overactivity of the thyroid gland (goitre) that we fail to remember that a considerable number of individuals have a thyroid gland that is not active enough.

In children this condition stunts the growth and is easily recognized but in those who have obtained full growth the condition may not be recognized unless the symptoms are very marked.

The marked symptoms of lack of thyroid juice, myxedema as it is called, are low body temperature, inability to stand the cold—lips, nose, ears, fingertips turning dark on exposure to cold—swelling of the skin and mucous membranes—jelly like swelling which however does not pit on pressure.

Dr. H. D. Kitchen, Winnipeg, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states that it is not hard for the physician to overlook cases of myxedema as the patient may not complain of being tired or cold because, as he has always been tired and has felt the cold readily, he may not think of these as symptoms. His inability to stand the cold may be taken for granted and the wearing of additional clothing (such as a sweater) in a comfortably heated room or extra clothing outdoors, and the use of extra bedding may have become so fixed a part of the routine that the patient would not likely speak about this to his physician unless he were asked about it.

In addition to the tendency to overweight, a slight sluggishness mentally and the above mentioned swellings of the skin and mucous membranes, there may be anemia (thin blood), pains in the joints, indigestion, and gripping pains in the chest.

As you know when overactivity of the thyroid gland exists the basal metabolism test shows the rate at which the body processes are working to be much faster than normal. In myxedema naturally the rate is slower than normal. Dr. Kitchen thinks that too much reliance is placed on this test in myxedema and not enough on the other symptoms—tiredness and feeling the cold so easily.

The treatment in these cases should, in addition to the use of thyroid extract, take into consideration the patient himself.

"Patients should be regarded as individuals not as stomachs, hearts, or chests."

GREAT RICHES

by Mabel Howe Farnham

SYNOPSIS: The Great War served, at least, to postpone what seemed an inevitable break between James and Jane Stimson. It took James out of New Concord, Mass., and away from the law business that his miserable home life was slowly destroying. James came back a major was arrested at St. Louis by an apparently pleasant Jane—And found that he didn't have anything whatever he wanted to say to her. Now he is home and has simply walked out on Jane after their first luncheon together.

Chapter 42

JAMES' WALK

JAMES had left the Mansion with every intention of walking as fast as his legs would carry him the two miles that separated him from his waiting dinner, at Oak and North Fifth Streets. He was late already. Jane would have a right to be sore as hell.

He came to the lane that dipped abruptly down to the River Road. Almost involuntarily his feet turned into it. He was a coward, a cur, a contemptible ass. But he had not, he could not find the courage to go back and face Jane.

He knew, nevertheless, that sooner or later he must go back. It was impossible, being what he was, just to walk out of her life and never see her again, as he desperately longed to do.

Well, this was his last day in uniform, the last hours he had left to feel himself a man and not just a husband. Wasn't he entitled to spend these hours to suit himself? The Northrups, mère and père, were certain to put in an appearance that evening.

If he had to listen another half hour to more of Mr. Northrup's slobber there sure would be murder done. God! How he would enjoy squeezing that fat purple throat, grinding his hob-nailed heel on that blotched overfed face!

James ate his "welcome home" dinner out of a can beside a camp fire. It consisted of stew, baked potatoes, coffee and raw corn whiskey.

His host was an extremely dirty but engaging member of the I.W.W. who had been thrown off the Kansas City local a few miles north of Leavenworth. James saw the camp fire from the road, made for it and was invited to dinner.

He stayed until after ten, arguing the merits and demerits of the capitalistic system. He had a glorious time. So did his host. By the time James had drunk his full share of the quart bottle he had pledged himself solemnly to a war of extermination of the capitalistic class.

Shooting was too good for them. He'd begin in the morning. And he knew just who he'd begin with. But first he had a little matter to settle which could not be put off any longer. If his friend, his dear friend Bill, would look him up in the morning. . . .

James heaved himself unsteadily to his legs, wrung the hand of his new-found comrade and started northward. The first mile or two he sang, he danced, he capered. Afraid of Jane? Afraid of the Northrups? He laughed long and loud. He hadn't been afraid of the Germans, had he? He hadn't been afraid to tackle a nest of machine guns? Well, yes, he had. He had been damned afraid. He'd even been sick at his stomach.

But he'd kept on going, hadn't he? Just as he'd keep on going now until he'd had it out with Mrs. James Stimson and told her a thing or two that needed telling. One thing was that her paunchy nitwitted old bore of a father should never step foot over their threshold. The damned old capitalist! His friend Bill was right.

BY THE time James came to Commercial Street his head was a little clearer. He was not so anxious now to face Jane and have it out with her. Jane had a nasty way of getting under his hide and putting him in the wrong, no matter how guiltless his actions, how virtuous his motives.

It would be like her now to say that he was drunk. He had never been so sober in his life. Let her say what she liked: he wouldn't listen. After she had finished he would have his turn. He kept doggedly on.

When he came to the house at Oak and Fifth Streets he saw that the lights were on. Crossing the lawn cautiously James peeked under a blind. Jane and her father were in the back parlor. Mr. Northrup was asleep in his chair. Jane was sitting bolt upright with a red spot on either cheek. She looked as if she had been crying.

But he'd bet his Sam Browne belt against the chances of the Germans at the Peace Conference that Jane wouldn't do any crying when she saw him. She'd be too busy flaying him alive. James pulled his cap down over one eye at a jaunty angle, straightened his tie and marched manfully up the front steps.

Step by step he felt his courage oozing down his spine, down his legs, out of his lagging toes. But it was too late now. They must have heard him. He gulped and opened the front door.

Jane stood in the archway between the hall and the front parlor. James closed the door behind him and took off his cap. One glance at Jane's angry contemptuous face, at her tightly compressed lips and James' eyes fell.

Mr. Northrup stirred in the next room. James looked this way and that, anywhere but at Jane. He found himself glaring at the inoffensive tables and chairs, glaring at the walls.

There was a large photograph of Jane on the mantel. It seemed to James that those pictured eyes were looking down at him and sneering . . . as Jane was now sneering. Those eyes said to him that he was a coward and a failure. They knew that he could talk big to a drunken tramp, could talk big to himself. But talk was cheap.

"Where have you been?" Jane spat at him.

"Nowhere. Just walking around."

"I don't believe you. Why, you've been drinking. You're drunk. You loathsome, disgusting beast! On your first night . . . after two years . . . you leave me here, frantic with anxiety, and go off and get drunk! You dare to come home drunk!"

She beat her hands together frantically. Mr. Northrup appeared behind her blinking sleepily. His hair was rumpled, his tie askew. When he caught sight of James he was suddenly fully awake.

"You," he said, "you . . . contemptible good-for-nothing. Drunk! You ought to be horsewhipped, yes, horsewhipped. If it were not for the scandal, I would do it myself."

"YOU had better go home, Father dear," Jane said evenly. "I can deal with James drunk or sober. I have a few things to say to him that I'd rather say to him alone." She smiled, an ugly thin-lipped smile.

There was anticipation in this smile and . . . and pleasure. It would be a pleasure to Jane to goad and sting him. Horror of Jane, horror and loathing engulfed him. He stared at her a long moment. Why, he wasn't afraid of Jane. By God's mercy he wasn't the least afraid of her. James abruptly laughed loud and long.

"It may seem funny to you," Jane said, thrusting her face close to his across the table, "but I confess I fail to see anything funny in a drunken lout coming home to his wife, horrible, filthy . . . God, if you could see yourself."

James stopped laughing as suddenly as he had begun. He leaned even closer to Jane, his hands on the table. "It isn't funny," he said soberly. "I only laughed to keep from crying. We ought to be crying, both of us. It's a mercy that you ought to thank God for on your knees that you cannot see yourself . . . as I see you . . . as you are."

Mr. Northrup, who had been fairly dancing up and down in impatience, broke in. "You'll hear from me in the morning, young man. Yes, you'll hear from me. If you say a word more to my daughter in your present obscene condition I warn you that . . ."

"Shut up. Another bleat from you and I'll throw you out of that door. Just you open your pig sty of a mouth again . . ."

Mr. Northrup had already opened his mouth. He closed it hastily. James turned to Jane.

"May I ask you one question before I go? It's a question that's haunted me for a long time."

Jane, clinging to her father, nodded but did not speak. James asked, "Did you love me when you married me?"

Jane amazingly shook off her father's restraining arm and came forward, came around the table. "Of course I loved you, my dear. Of course I loved you," she said and put a timid hand on James' shoulder.

"But I never loved you, so I am the one most to blame. Forgive me. And forget me. Goodbye."

Country

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Squirrels migrate when a hard winter is in prospect, the weasel changes its fur coat, the birds fly southward ahead of time—all animals seem in tune with nature—except man and those creatures he has trained to domestic life.

Man compensates, it is true. By his superior knowledge and skill he has learned to adjust himself to the most untoward circumstances, and is able to live under almost any conditions. None the less he suffers from the strain of an adjustment which he has had to make over a period of centuries instead of eons.

The conditions of city life grow more and more difficult, and the strain is beginning to tell on those who have stayed in the overcharged surroundings too long. It is true, as Mr. Dooley used to say, that if you want fresh eggs and milk and vegetables, the best service in sickness and in health, the city is probably the place to get them, summer and winter. But physical luxuries are not the whole of life, and especially not in childhood. Children need the country, if it is only for a few months every year.

Ordinary summer resorts do not satisfy the requirements. For a few weeks at least the child should be allowed to come in touch with nature as it really is. It should wander about unhampered by the formal clothes and conventions of society. A pair of overalls and sneakers are quite enough, and even that they should be clean is not essential.

The child should have a chance to relax from the noise and hurry of city life, to feel the ground under its feet, and dream away carefree hours in the company of birds, beasts and growing things. Many of our best men have come from country backgrounds. How can we be sure that the environment was not a contributing cause to their greatness?

EASTER

Down the Vista of the Years

by H. L. Van Deusen

No. 15—Two Easter Messages.

The ruthless hand of the draft plucked Dick from his home and sat him down on the battle fields of France.

The morning that Dick and a hundred other youths had been "sent away with a smile" in a parade from the old armory on Broadway to the West Shore Railroad station, was a heart breaking one for his mother and dad, as they returned to a home that would no longer seem the same, for Dick was an only child.

Time dragged wearily on. Over there the noise of battle rent the air; back home the Easter season was drawing near with its message that the world seemed to have forgotten.

Back home the old folks eagerly read the latest dispatches from the war front, and watched each day for the letters that seldom came for Uncle Sam's mail service was not the smooth working machine it had been in pre-war days, due largely to the censorship under which all mail from the soldiers to the folks back home must pass.

"A letter for you," said the postman cheerily, as he handed Dick's mother two missives.

"It's a letter from Dick," she told her husband, "but I don't recognize the other handwriting."

"Read Dick's letter first," said the husband.

With trembling fingers she tore tore open the letter and read: "Dear Mom and Dad—I got the package you sent and it came in mighty handy. Talking about packages, Smiler, he's the feller in our company I wrote you about before, got a package also from his folks and guess what it had in it; an Easter egg. Gee, it don't seem that Easter is so near.

"Say mom, do you remember when I was a kid and would hop out of bed bright and early Easter morning to see what the bunny had brought me, and after ransacking the house only to find the Easter basket under my bed? Gee, that was fun those days, and what a kick you and dad used to get out of it, too.

"And talking about Easter, don't forget dad to get mom that new Easter bonnet.

"We hear over here that the folks back home are cleaning up and mom you tell dad I said he get out and hustle one of those $15 a day jobs we hear are floating around loose back home.

"As I wrote you before, mom, there is no use in me writing just where I am over here as the censor could only cut it out anyway, but believe me we ain't forgetting over here that we're in the army now.

"I am feeling fine and dandy and hope you are the same and don't forget when you write to tell me all the news back home. Letters are few and far between over here, and I get a big thrill out of reading what you and dad write. Tell dad to spur up a little. He can write a good letter when he wants to and I am dead anxious to hear from him too.

"As I was saying when a first glimpsed that Easter egg Smiler got in his package it brought back memories of Easter back home with you and dad. Jimminy I can see myself yet in that sort of greenish red suit I got last Easter. Member how you told me I looked like a circus peeler in it. Don't forget to keep the moths out of it while I am away for I expect to wear it next Easter if it fits.

"You write and ask me how I like army life? Well it ain't so bad. So far we got plenty to eat, at least our company has, and we got a good company cook. Boy what he can do to an ordinary egg and some beans.

"Member the time I used to stick my nose up at your pork and beans, mom? But don't forget I am in the army now and I guess I can eat most anything now.

"Well, there is one thing I know for sure and that is I won't be seeing you this Easter, but the way things look now we'll mop up here soon and next Easter—well, I hope you will be proud of your son when he comes farching home again.

"Don't forget to write and a million kisses for you and mom, your loving son."

"Nice cheery letter, mother," said dad as she paused, "but he don't give much information, but I suppose it's like he says, if he does write it in the censor would only cut it out. Who is the other letter from?"

"I'll open it and see," she replied as she tore open the envelope. She read but the opening sentence; then all became blurred and the letter dropped from her nerveless hands.

The sentence she read was "The commanding officer has instructed me to write you and tell you that your son is reported lost in battle—"

Rising high above the heart breaking sobs of the mother came the sound of the Easter chimes from the church nearby.

Origin of Honeydew Melons

The honeydew melon on the market in this country is the same as the melon listed by Paris seedsmen as Antibes Winter green fleshed melon. The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. This seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo.

"I JUST saw Christopher Columbus Crow," crowed Top Notch. "He had been calling on me only a short time before, but now he looks a fright. Something must have happened to him."

"Christopher! Christopher Columbus Crow," called Willy Nilly.

"Yes," answered Christopher from his nest, "yes, yes, caw, caw."

"Is anything the matter with you?"

"I'm quite all right," answered Christopher.

"Won't you let me see you?" Willy Nilly urged.

"I'll be down later if you don't mind. I'm very busy just now." But Christopher did not sound as though he were busy. His voice sounded weary and lifeless. It was apparent something was the matter.

"Please, please, Christopher, let me see you."

"Send the others away," cawed Christopher, "and I'll come down. I can't come down while every one is around, I really can't."

"Do leave us for a little while," said Willy Nilly, and the others left with Top Notch, who repeated his description of how Christopher looked.

He was indeed a sorry sight.

"Don't tell them. You know what happened, don't you?" Christopher asked Willy Nilly.

"Was it a kingbird?" Willy Nilly asked.

"Yes, a kingbird can always get the better of me, and I wanted to think I could get the better of him this time, I was wrong, that's all.

"But I'll be better soon. Please don't tell anyone, it's not the kind of news I want to have get around." And Willy Nilly promised.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — Administration leaders in the house didn't make an unconditional surrender when they agreed to forego an attempt to "gag" the membership of that body on the social security bill.

They kept concealed up their sleeves a trick which may come in handy later on.

The social security bill went before the house absolutely without benefit of restrictive rules to protect it. Any one of the 435 representatives is free to attempt to amend it in any way he chooses. But—

The house has a way of considering a measure in what it chooses to call "The Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union" before it gets down to the task of accepting or rejecting a piece of legislation.

"The Committee of the Whole House" is something entirely different from the house of representatives itself.

Safe For Congressmen

IN THE "Committee" a roll call vote is never taken. Controversial sections of a bill are accepted or rejected either by an "aye or no" vote, a division or a teller vote.

The point is that a controversial section of a bill may be killed in the "committee" without anyone on the outside—particularly one's constituents—knowing who voted for or against.

Applying this to the social security bill, consider what may happen:

The Townsend old-age pension plan, the Lundeen bill and other substitutes, all anathema to the administration will be offered and debated. The question of whether they are to be accepted or rejected will be decided in the "Committee of the Whole House" by either one or probably all three of the above-stated methods of voting.

• • •

A Way Out

A REPRESENTATIVE, for example, may be opposed to the Townsend plan in principle, yet such pressure has been brought to bear on him from the folks back home he may feel it politically expedient to support it.

He can vote against it in the "Committee of the Whole" and no one will be the wiser. If the Townsend plan is voted down then, that's all there is to it, for it won't be reported to the house. If it prevails, he will have an opportunity to record himself one way or the other later.

The house bosses make no secret of the fact they are banking heavily on this parliamentary situation to keep the social security bill more or less intact. They much rather would have had the "gag" rule invoked, but since that seemed impossible, they were forced to accept the best they could get.

Lights of New York
by L. L. STEVENSON

Curious things happen in the City of the Seven Million. For instance: Ira Wolfert, dramatic critic of the North American Newspaper Alliance, with his wife was awaiting the opening curtain of "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles," when a friend touched Mrs. Wolfert on the shoulder and asked her if she had lost her purse. Hasty investigation showed that she had. The friend explained that she had boarded an Eighth avenue subway train and happened to see the purse under the seat. Opening it, she found Mrs. Wolfert's name. Knowing where her friends would be, she followed them to the Guild theater and made restoration—and saw the play with the Wolferts. Incidentally, the purse contained all the current funds of the family.

After all this time, I've found an ally in the crusade against red fingernails. He is William H. Allen, secretary of the municipal civil service commission. He holds that red fingernails remind him of the "blood of a dead horse." He has issued no orders against such feminine adornments in his department but refuses to give dictation to the five or six stenographers who serve him, if their fingernails are that deep red. Also he regards fresh air and exercise as better than make up. His attitude has caused quite a lot of talk among the girls in his department. But there is a noticeable paleness of both fingernails and faces.

In the opinion of William P. Mulrooney, who has just completed two years as head of the state liquor control board, New York has the most liberal and the best enforced liquor law of any state in the Union. There are defects, of course, he admits, holding that perfection in handling liquor will never be reached. Incidentally, Chairman Mulrooney is a teetotaller and always has been. That, after 37 years in the police department, he should be in the liquor business is a constant surprise to him. In the last two years, the state has collected $43,000,000 in liquor licenses.

Not so long ago, the news broke that an investigation had disclosed that a downtown financial club had run afoul of the liquor laws because the stuff that went into the highballs and was served straight, lacked authority. There was no prosecution, however, Chairman Mulrooney explained why. The guilt was not on the house committee or those connected with the bar. It seems that the night watchman and porters liked their liquor, and to conceal their takings, had added water to the bottled goods.

An announcement by William Fellowes Morgan, Jr., commissioner of markets, indicates that a colorful bit of metropolitan life is to come to an end at last. The announcement concerns push-carts of which there are about 14,000 scattered all over the city. Instead of allowing them to continue to park in the streets, Commissioner Morgan is planning on putting the merchants under cover and thus making small shopkeepers of them.

• • •

The start, according to present plans, is to be made on Park avenue, between One Hundred Eleventh and One Hundred Fifteenth streets, about June 1. The New York Central railroad runs above ground there and the railroad elevated structure will serve as a roof for 467 stalls, each 7 by 8 feet. The cost will be $200,000 and in return the city will receive $3.50 a week rental from each merchant.

Yachtsmen Warned of Alcatraz Prison Peril

San Francisco, Calif.—Yachtsmen who do not want to have their sails or their persons shot full of holes must keep away from Alcatraz island, federal prison penitentiary on the bay.

Warden James B. Johnston posted orders that any yacht or power cruiser within 300 yards of "Devil's Isle," will get a bullet chucked across his bow.

The government is taking no chances that friends of Al Capone, or any of its other prize prisoners might use a regatta race as an excuse to come close up to the island and pick up an extra deck hand.

Deer With a Memory Chases Man Up Tree

Dedham, Mass.—Henry Howland was "treed" by a buck deer—one he believed didn't forget a past experience.

Howland, working in his back yard, saw several deer crossing a field, when suddenly one espied him, chased and forced him atop a henhouse.

During the half-hour imprisonment he noticed a scar on the animal's fore leg, the place where he wounded a deer three year ago. The buck apparently recognized him, he thought.

Both the price of fertilizer and the outlook for farm prices favor the use of fertilizer this spring. The farmer's dollar buys more fertilizer now, compared with the pre-war period, than it buys of the other major commodities purchased by farmers, according to the price indexes of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Slim Chance Seen For U. S. Sahara Despite Midwest's Dust And Drought

By F. B. COLTON.
(Associated Press Science Writer.)

Washington (AP).—It will take more than dust storms and drouth to turn any of America's midwest into a Sahara-like desert, despite the ominous portents of the current swirling dust clouds.

This is the reassuring opinion of Dr. William J. Humphreys, veteran meteorologist of the U. S. weather bureau. Although the dust storms, aided and abetted by continuing drouth, are doing heavy damage, he says there is no reason to fear that the area where they prevail will become a permanent desert of shifting sands devoid of all vegetation.

Weather Cycle to Swing.

Only a complete change of climate could bring about such a calamity, says Dr. Humphreys, and there is no prospect that such a thing will happen for thousands of years. Weather bureau scientists are expecting a slight change soon, toward a cycle of cooler, wetter years, but this shift will be only part of the regular rhythm of periods of hot-dry and cold-wet years that have been recurring regularly ever since weather records have been kept.

The Sahara desert of northern Africa was produced by a major change of climate far greater than any in prospect for this country. That change took place slowly through countless ages, while what is now Europe was slowly emerging from under the great ice sheet that covered it in glacial times.

How Sahara Was Born.

The ice sheet covered Europe for a vast length of time, but when it began to melt, the air currents that govern weather were shunted into new paths as they flowed south, no longer bringing rain to northern Africa. As a result the Sahara desert was born.

No such change of climate is in prospect for North America, says Dr. Humphreys, as long as the frozen north stays frozen. He believes the ice there will melt some day, but not for 5,000, perhaps 10,000 years.

Dust storms are nothing new for the United States, for they have always existed in the west, but until the last two years they were purely local disturbances. However, several years of drouth in the high plains, added to the effect of denuding thousands of acres of land where rainfall is normally light, provided the first ingredient of the dust storms.

Both these photographs look as if they were taken in a desert. The one at the right was—in the Sahara. The other one shows a farm in Colorado after a dust storm. But even though dust clouds do sweep over sections of the mid-west a federal meteorologist sees no danger of any section becoming a Sahara. Only a complete change of climate, he says, could cause a midwestern desert, and he finds no prospect of that occurring for thousands of years.

Testing New Grasses.

The dry plains were ready for the second ingredient when it came—the strong winds that normally blow over the plains in spring and summer. The winds found vast areas of light dust waiting to be whirled into the air. Until the season of strong gales in the region ends about June 1, dust storms may continue, says Dr. Humphreys.

The dust storm evil can be cured eventually, weather bureau men believe, by re-grassing the dry plains and taking other measures to curb wind erosion. New grasses, designed to grow easily, root firmly and spread rapidly over the soil, are being tested as possible aids to dust storm control.

Sharp Gains in Fees Reported by Treasury

Washington, April 20 (AP)—A treasury report published today showed sharp gains in tax collections. Total collections in March this year were placed at $507,304,493, compared with $390,352,846 in the same month last year.

In addition to this 43 per cent upturn in receipts for the month, the report indicated taxes taken in during the first nine months of the fiscal year were 26 greater than in the corresponding period a year ago.

Secretary Morgenthau in a recent radio address said mounting revenues were one big factor influencing him to believe that the public debt probably would not reach the sum which President Roosevelt had estimated it would reach by June, 1936. The President's budget message had anticipated a gross debt of $34,000,000,000 by that date.

Gains in all types of taxes—from levies against income to those on liquor—were shown in the report. Income taxes were up 40 per cent during the month. Liquor taxes produced $32,928,116, an increase of $4,607,192 over the same month last year. Stamp sales reflected the increased flow of liquor, indicating withdrawal of 8,831,706 gallons of liquor and 3,257,717 barrels of beer.

Shipment of Fords Via the Hudson River

For the first time in history the Ford Motor Car Company took advantage of the Hudson river to ship a consignment of new Ford cars and trucks from the plant at Kearney, N. J., to the Green Island distributing center at Troy. Yesterday 100 shiny new cars and trucks aboard five large barges and six smaller ones were towed up the river from the New Jersey plant to Green Island.

The shipment was on barges of the Conners Boat Company of this city. The 150 mile jaunt was made without mishap and there was a crowd of people lining the Menands and Congress streets bridges at Troy to witness the two tugs guiding the huge flotilla up the channel.

The boats making up yesterday's flotilla include the following large barges: The Edward P. McNally, the Mary E. Horan, the Creek of Kingston, the Crescent of New York and Lenco of Kingston; and the following small barges: the Catherine, the Betty, the Lorna, the Ryan, the Linda and the Hilda. They were pulled by the tug Lion and pushed by the Rondout.

All of the boats are the property of Conners Boat Company of Kingston.

Little Boy Crushed to Death Beneath Truck

Evading a pursuer and running in front of a two and a half ton truck, Patsy Ferraro, five-year-old son of Selvano and Jeannette Hines Ferraro, formerly of Port Ewen, lost his life while playing tag near his home in the Bronx, Friday.

Little Patsy had his life crushed out by the two front wheels of the truck. He was dead when picked up by his father, jobless and out of a hospital only three months, who was in a drug store not far from the scene of the tragedy.

Frank Madden, a vegetable dealer and driver of the truck, was summoned to homicide court. Detectives said the brakes on the truck were defective.

Not less than five minutes before the accident, Patsy promised his mother that he'd stay off the roadway when he went out to play tag with his brother, aged nine years, and two other boys.

The body of little Patsy, the youngest and thus the favorite of the Ferraro family, will be brought to Port Ewen for funeral services and burial Monday.

Herbs has been missing since last Monday and Chief of Police Thomas Connors said last night he holds a warrant for his arrest on a charge of appropriating for his own use $113.55 in taxes paid by David Kline, a Hudson shoe merchant.

The missing treasurer's automobile was located in an Albany garage.

"I have no idea where he has gone," Chief Connors said. "He told his family he was going on a business trip and would be back that night. He never showed up."

Three state auditors now are examining the city's books. They are expected to complete their work about May 1.

Former Senator Wiley Dead In Albany

William Sherman Crawford Wiley, quartermaster general of New York State under the late Governor Levi P. Morton, who conferred on him the title of brigadier general, died Friday in Albany Hospital. He was eight-one years old.

Mr. Wiley, a native of Scotland, retired from an active political career twenty years ago. He had been State Senator for two terms, 1901 and 1902, representing the 25th Senatorial District, comprising Ulster and Greene counties. Mr. Wiley was a presidential elector in 1892 and in 1900. In 1895, after he had been a member of the Republican State Committee for two years, he was appointed quartermaster general of the state.

He studied in the district school in Greene county and at Lehigh University, where he took a course in mechanical engineering. After leaving school, he was manager of the Chapin Machine Works, in Connecticut, and later founded the Wiley Knitting Machine Works, in New York city. During the height of his political career, he was president of the Aken Knitting Company, in Columbia county; president of the Wiley Manufacturing Company, at Catskill, N. Y.; president of the Catskill Illuminating and Power Company; treasurer of the Catskill Foundry and Machine Works, and a director of the Catskill National Bank.

After serving as state senator, Mr. Wiley lived in Albany, and served as purchasing agent for the State Excise Commission. Later he became a member of the Court of Appeals staff, from which position he retired several years ago.

UTILITY INSTALLMENT SALES REACH MARK

Washington, D. C.—Gas and electric utility companies sold about $123,300,000 worth of equipment on installment last year, a decided increase over 1933, according to reports received by the Federal Housing Administration. It is estimated by utility association officials that between 80 and 90 per cent of these installment purchases were eligible for modernization credit insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

The Edison Electric Institute estimates that the total amount of installment paper carried by the electric utility companies exceeds $100,000,000, of which about $75,000,000 is for equipment to be placed in homes. As the great bulk of this paper is for such items as kitchen ranges, water heaters, mechanical refrigerators and complete electric kitchens, the institute officials estimate that between 80 and 90 per cent of the items are eligible for modernization loans. There was no estimate made, however, of the amount of purchases made through insured modernization credit.

Appliance Sales

The American Gas Association reported that about $35,000,000 worth of gas appliances was sold in 1934, of which about two-thirds was on the installment plan. It was stated in the letter that gas-appliance sales have improved, but that no figures are available concerning the proportion of purchases made through insured modernization credit.

It was stated in the reports that the companies which are members of the two organizations are actively supporting the Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration in a majority of the communities taking part in the program. It was further stated that the general benefits of this cooperation "are worth the cost and effort, although not directly measurable."

IN THE REIGN OF GEORGE V

6. War-Weary Ruler Greets Allies

England, in the words of Earl Haig, field commander in France, had its "back to the wall" when this photograph was taken early in 1918. The big German drive, calculated to split the French and British armies, and roll the latter back to the channel ports before America's aid could become effective, was in full swing. But these hours, the darkest in the 25 years reign which England now is celebrating, proved to be the ones before the dawn of victory. The "Yanks" were on their way when this contingent of the U. S. A. tank corps, stopping in England, on the way to battle, was reviewed by King George.

The 150th anniversary of the birth of John James Audubon, naturalist whose fame rests especially on his paintings of birds, occurs on Friday, April 26. It will be observed in schools and with appropriate exercises by Audubon Societies throughout the United States. The National Association of Audubon Societies has issued a special commemorative pamphlet in honor of the day.

This year marks the twentieth anniversary of the opening of telephone communication across the continent. For it was just 20 years ago that the human voice first spanned the more than 3,000 miles between the Atlantic and the Pacific, and transcontinental telephone service, long the dream of the telephone engineers, became a reality.

BARBARA BELL FASHION PATTERNS

Pattern No. 1592-B

Smart House-Frock for Matronly Figures

The accompanying sketch shows us how trim the large woman can look when her housedress is chosen with an eye to straight, simple lines and created in a fabric that is not too work-a-day in character.

This model is interesting because it is so simple. The lines follow the figure to a nicety eliminating unnecessary details. The panel treatment gives the desired contour to the figure and short, set-in sleeves remove possibility of strain. The severity of tailored lines is relieved by a soft collar which ends at the center-front in tie ends.

The skirt is made with side-pleats back and front. The best type of housedresses show fulness in this way and it happens to be enough like the Summer daytime frocks to make this design usable for other purposes besides housework.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1592-B is designed in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52 and 54. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material; ¾ yard of contrast.

Fashions and Household Hints for Women

Cheerful "Blond" Furniture Brightens Darkest Rooms With Glowing Effects

Honey mahogany does things for Chippendale chairs.

By MARGERY TAYLOR

(Copyright, 1935, By McCall's Magazine for The Freeman)

Now comes "blond" furniture—a few of the new blond chairs or tables will brighten up the darkest room full of dark furniture.

Really glowing effects are now achieved by the designers and makers by simply leaving out the stain and using only a clear white shellac and wax so as to bring out the full beauty of the grain.

Mahogany, maple, beech and white oak have become "new" woods with this modern treatment. Mahogany is usually bleached before finishing and it comes out a beautiful honey color—delightful for eighteenth century pieces and bringing new charm to Chippendale chairs.

Fine for a child's bedroom is a blond maple group in a Colonial cottage design—especially against blue walls, with woodwork and doors finished like the furniture.

Maple has been entirely transformed by the new finishes—you can have it in any of six interesting disguises. These are fruitwood, a kind of modified cherry; bone, a gay light beifie; chocolate and white; cafe au lait; parchment, and pale green. The new maple becomes the ideal wood for the popular rooms of brown with cream or pastels.

Even oak is coming back to fresh triumphs, thanks to the new finishes of the modern designers. It will be welcome, too, because of its sturdy merits. But don't be afraid that we are going to have to look again at the "golden oak" of our childhood. With its clear finish, oak becomes an entirely different wood—without any heavy look. One of the leading designers is using a light gray finish, with interesting effects.

No. 3683

Be prepared for the warm weather with this smart lacy frock. The open stitch resembles clusters and clusters of shells, which are set off in relief by the yoke which is closely worked. This dress is crocheted with Wondersheen, which has a brilliant sheen and seems to improve in appearance with each laundering. We shall be glad to send you printed directions for duplicating this garment upon receipt of stamped self-addressed envelope sent to Editor Woman's Page, Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Ask for No. 3683.

Hardwood Floors Must Be Cleaned And Then Rubbed

Do not wash a hardwood floor. Wipe instead with a cloth dipped in kerosene, or if you are afraid of its inflammable qualities you can buy less dangerous liquids.

Rub hard with a dry cloth after the cleaning process, and if your window ledges are of hardwood, too, use the same cleaning system.

If your kitchen floor is covered with a floor protector which gets spotted with grease, one of the best ways of removing the grease (and this applies to wooden surfaces as well) is to sprinkle with starch until the grease is absorbed and hard. Then scrape. Your scraping need not be so vigorous. Nor will it be so hard on the floor.

Never let grease remain on the floor for later cleaning. You will have harder work, and less satisfactory results if you do.

SIMPLE SANDWICHES TASTY FOR AFTERNOON OR EVENING

Sometimes the busy housewife has not the time to prepare a great variety of sandwiches for the afternoon and evening party but would like something unusual yet appetizing to everyone.

Grate some cheese and mix it with butter. Add a little mayonnaise and sprinkle with cayenne pepper. Mix well. Cut out squares, cubes and thin slices of bread and toast. Then put your mixture over them.

Another novelty in taste and appearance is drained pimiento, sliced. It may be placed on your bread squares with a thin slice of cheese on top. Cover with a little flour and fry in butter. You can make your toast first and then cover with the fried spread.

COOKING CARE NECESSARY TO MAKE DISHES PERFECT

Sometimes the success of cooking and preparing special dishes has more to do with watching out for certain pitfalls than anything else.

For example in making jelly salads, all your measurements must be very exact.

Nor should you ever let your gelatine boil, although you should make sure that the liquid in which it is dissolved has boiled.

Another point to watch is that the gelatine should be partly substantial before fruit, vegetables or whatever you are using, are added.

Oven Chart

(Hang Near Stove)

250 to 300 degrees—slow oven.
300 to 375 degrees—moderate oven.
375 to 425 degrees—hot oven.
425 to 500 degrees — very hot oven.

To remove fresh petrolatum stains, sponge with turpentine. If stains are old, rub with turpentine and roll up for one hour, then sponge with more turpentine. Boiling water "sets" the stain.

Colored linens frequently have lint on them when ironed. To prevent this wash well by themselves and rinse through 3 waters. Roll in Turkish towel for an hour and a half; straighten out and dry. Press on wrong side with moderately warm iron. This advice is especially good for colored handkerchiefs.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

The new knitted fashions for summer days are particularly effective in attractive color combinations, lacy effects and interesting stripe designs which take diverse ways to smartness.

Such frocks as these are well adapted to the requirements of the active sportswoman and for travel and country wardrobes because of their ability to maintain a good appearance.

In the sketch at left is shown a smart one-piece knitted frock which uses the stripe theme and many wooden buttons down the front. The color combination is natural and brown, the natural stripes being of cotton while the brown stripes are knitted of linen thread. This model has a large pointed collar with brown bow at the throat, short sleeves, one patch pocket and a brown leather belt.

The two-piece frock at right is of frille boucle in dawn blue with lacy stripe design down in verticle arrangement on the overblouse, which also boasts short puffed sleeves, striped club collar, kerchief scarf and a self belt. The matching skirt of plain color is knitted in a tweed-like weave.

By the Master Gardener.

Contrary to general belief, almost anyone can have a beautiful, velvety green lawn. To be sure, certain fundamental principles must be followed, but they are few and very simple to grasp. If your lawn making efforts have not been crowned with success, try again this spring. If you follow the suggestions below carefully I am sure you will have the kind of a lawn you've always wanted:

Soil—A sandy loam is ideal for a lawn but not a necessity. It is well, however, to approximate this type of soil, which can be done by working in a little sand with soils which consist principally of clay, or working in a little clay with soils that are very sandy.

Preparation of Seed Bed—Spade the area which is to be made into a lawn to the depth of six inches provided this is not deeper than the top soil covering the area. After spading, work the soil with hoe and rake until it is finely pulverized.

Applying Plant Food—Apply four pounds of complete plant food per one hundred square feet evenly over the area and work it lightly into the top couple of inches of soil. This is important for few soils contain, in an available form, the many food elements grass plants need for healthy growth.

Seed—As in most things, cheap seed is false economy. Buy good seed suitable for your location. Consult your local seedsman. Remember that shady areas in your lawn must be seeded with shade-tolerant grasses.

Seeding—Apply the seed evenly. If you seed by hand, apply half of the seed lengthwise and the other half crosswise. After seeding, roll the area or tamp it with a wide board to assure good contact of the seed with the soil.

Watering—Immediately after rolling, water the lawn thoroughly, using a very fine spray. Water daily thereafter until the seeds germinate. After the seeds germinate, water thoroughly once of twice weekly, as needed.

Clipping—Do not let the new lawn grow higher than three inches. Never cut it shorter than one and one-half inches. Remove the clippings from the lawn.

It is best to make your lawn as early in spring as possible, for then the grass has an opportunity to become established before the hot, trying months of summer.

Leftover cooked cereal can be formed into flat cakes, browned in small amount of fat and served with syrup. This often appeals to children for lunch.

YOU CAN'T OVERESTIMATE IMPORTANCE OF COTTONS

By BARBARA BELL

You can't overestimate the importance of cottons and linens, this spring. Never was there such a variety of smart weaves to choose from, or a more brilliant profusion of patterns. Practical as well as smart, these new fabrics tub miraculously. The best are processed against shrinking, and a smaller group have wrinkle resisting qualities which help to keep them fresh without constant use of the iron.

Remember the candlewick cottons that were snached last summer from bedrooms and put to such chic use in sports, formal daytime, and even evening frocks? They're back again, for sports, town and beach wear. Use them for spectator wear in one-piece dresses with simple lines to show off the fabric, in tailored jackets with natural linen skirts and blouses that pick up the color of the tufting, and also for plain white swagger coats.

Everything on the surface with these new cottons. There are more nubs, blisters, and quilted weaves, more raised stripes, plaids and polka dots, more eyelet embroideries than you can imagine. Cotton matelasses, like seersuckers, don't need pressing—in fact, it's fatal, if you do.

Be sure to own one cotton that looks like a linen. These include the peasant weaves with bright spaced designs on natural grounds. Spongy, porous weaves are stunning in table cloth plaids and gingham checks. Not all of the linen-like weaves are rough; there is one that looks like a sheer handkerchief linen, and it comes in delectable prints and pastels.

Dots have the edge on stripes and plaids for the moment, at least. Some are as tiny as pin points; others are fifty-cent size. Sometimes they're scattered evenly, and sometimes they're spaced into groups.

AN EASIER WAY TO CONTROL WEEDS IN THE LAWN

By The Master Gardener

Turf authorities agree that the best permanent protection against weeds in the lawn is a vigorous, well formed sod or turf. Young weeds have difficulty in gaining a foothold in such a turf.

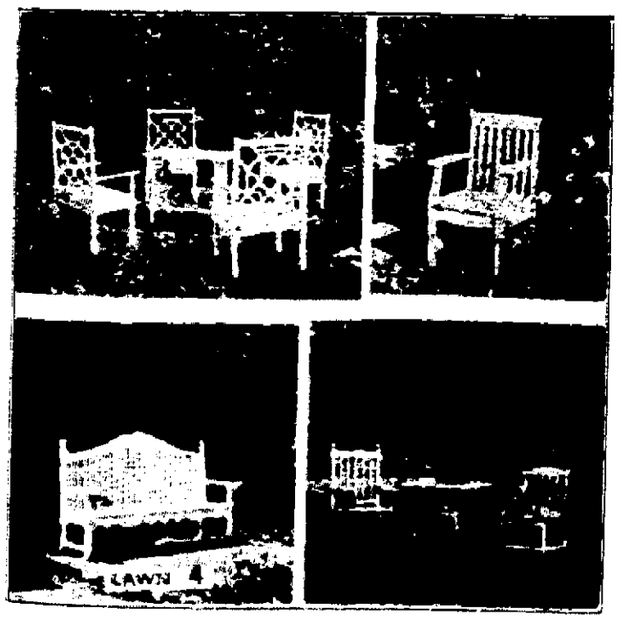

In those portions of the lawn where weeds are already established, it is desirable to dig them carefully from the lawn. Then by following a systematic and sound lawn maintenance program of seeding, feeding, watering and mowing, they can be kept under control.

Experiments prove that weeds thrive where grass is thin or in a weakened condition. Starved or half-starved grass has little chance of combatting the growth of weeds. A thickly matted turf of vigorous grass, having a strong root system, is needed to eliminate them.

Such a turf is not easy to penetrate—the weed is handicapped. The mat of well developed roots crowds around the roots of the weed and thereby hinders its growth, all of which has a tendency to choke out the weeds.

By mowing often and regularly, the weed is prevented from making any substantial top growth and from going to seed. Each cutting will "bleed" and weaken the weed and being further handicapped by the well developed turf and roots produced by proper feeding of the grass, the weed is eventually eliminated.

Attractive Garden Furniture

(Designs Copyright by Southern Pine Association)

In the illustrations above are shown several different designs of garden tables, chairs and lattice bench which help to make the lawn and home grounds more serviceable and beautiful.

Some of the designs are comparatively plain in appearance while others are more ornate, but all are attracting and useful and not difficult to build. All these designs have been tested by experts and have proved satisfactory in every way, the Southern Pine Association.

Methods of construction have been employed whereby complicated joints are avoided and when well nailed or bolted the work will be strong and rigid and withstand the rough handling to which such garden furniture usually is subjected.

Single Garden Furniture Sheets Nos. 21 and 22, showing designs and working drawings of these and various other kinds of garden furniture, will be sent free on request to the Southern Pine Association.

GRANDMA'S HERB GARDEN IS RETURNING TO FAVOR

Modern cooking methods have turned old-fashioned in one respect—they have returned to grandma's garden of flavors for a few sweet herbs. Europeans have always made use of them to advantage, although some are too strong for American tastes.

There are literally hundreds to choose from. Here is a list of a few that are easily grown: Sweet basil, marjoram, mint, tarragon, annual lavender, thyme, sage and dill.

Sweet basil, a favorite of French cooks for soups, stews, dressings and sauces; marjoram, used for the same purposes; thyme, often used in combinations with basil and marjoram or alone or with sage; mint, to keep the lamb from being lonely and to cook with green peas or to make into jelly; savory to flavor soups or stews and to cook with string beans; sage, the inevitable herb of the Thanksgiving turkey, and if worse comes to worse, usable as a hair dye; annual lavender, the dried blossoms of which make scent bags to be placed among the linen; a few plants of dill for the pickles.

All except thyme may be grown from seed, and by hanging up a few sprays to dry, they may be used the year through. Besides, several of them are fragrant additions to your vegetable patch.

Leftover biscuits can be reheated by sprinkling lightly with water and placing in covered pan and then heating 5 minutes in moderate oven. You will be surprised how fresh the biscuits will be.

MANY SHEER FABRICS ARE SHOWN FOR DRESSY FROCKS

By BARBARA BELL

As the afternoons grow longer, we find more use for the dressy type of frock to serve from luncheon through daylight dining. And as the days grow warmer, you will see an increasing accent on sheer materials in which to interpret this new femininity of fashion.

Printed chiffons are already appearing, particularly important with dark green or beetroot grounds for creamy white patterns. Violine prints on navy grounds, and white against clear red are endorsed in both crepes and sheers. The newest idea is the taffeta slip, paper thin, for wear under the chiffon frock. In ensembles, chiffon jackets are being lined with taffeta. A practical thought would be two separate jackets, of chiffon and taffeta, thus permitting the chiffon to be used alone in hot weather, and the taffeta jacket worn with other costumes.

After chiffons come a long list of interesting sheers, many of which are cotton. Printed voiles have never been more attractive, and there are scores of new open-work and corded waves. Dark nets are used in profusion, brown, navy and black taking crisp white details of pique or linen, and worn over taffeta. Cotton lace is right for everything from tailored types to garden party frocks, as well as for big-brimmed dinner hats. Organdies, tucked, corded and crinkled, are slated for a brilliant summer career. Inexpensive and charming are the new sheer ginghams with woven dots, the corduroy dimitles and printed batistes.

Vegetable Gardening May Be Made Full of Interest

By NANCY COOK WELLS

Many women have discovered that vegetable gardening is, after all, just as interesting as flower gardening and may be made decorative, too, if proper measures are taken to combine flowers and design with the colorful rows of vegetables.

I have a friend who spends most of her time in the vegetable patch. I really should say vegetable "living room," because she has designed this area into such comfortable and pleasing quarters. Her lot is narrow, but long, and she has used fully a half of the area behind the house for vegetables.

So that the rear lawn will not appear small she has bordered it with annuals and perennials to form a semicircle on the far side, where an arbor gate to the vegetable garden opens into it. The trellis work on the gate is covered with morning-glories, and the two seats on either side are almost entirely shaded, even on the sunniest days. This gate is the focal point of her landscape design, and through it you can see a bird bath in the center of the vegetable garden, and a bank of tall annuals at the rear of the lot.

Inside, the plot is laid out into four squares, with gravel paths and a border of alyssum and lobelia separating them. The center area with the bird bath is quite large, and she makes a practice of growing her novelties there each year in a circular bed.

One of the four squares is used for the staked vegetables (tomatoes, peas and beans), and another is for the vine crops. The two remaining contain rows of vegetables and flowers in a profusion of colors, the vegetables combining surprisingly well with the flowers.

On the whole her vegetable garden adds rather than detracts from the general landscape plan. Most important, it makes the home surroundings more livable.

PATTERN 5340

Tulips need not only grow in the garden, they can bloom very beautifully in cutwork, too! What is more, you'll have endless delight of them for cutwork makes a very durable piece of needlework. These motifs—you can do them in one or many colors—are easy to do. In the first place there are no bars—in the second place the lines are sweeping and simple and this, of course, makes the embroidery easy to do. You can use the motifs to make towelette, scarfs, small linens, towels, pillow cases and a most handsome dinner cloth.

In pattern 5340 you will find a transfer pattern of two and two reverse motifs 6¾ x 7 inches; two and two reverse motifs 3 x 3 inches, and six motifs 2 x 2 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; directions for doing cutwork; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to the Kingston Daily Freeman Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y.

Industrial Deaths During March

Albany, N. Y., April 20—A summary of the fatal industrial accidents reported to the Department of Labor during March was issued today by Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews. The figures compiled by the Division of Statistics and Information under the direction of Dr. E. B. Patton show a total of 131 lives lost in various industries throughout the state.

The manufacturing industry had 39 death cases, service and trade each had 21, construction 18, transportation 15, public employment 13 and other industries had four. The high total of 39 fatalities in manufacturing is the largest number recorded in this group since April 1931 when 40 deaths were reported.

Ninety-one deaths were reported from the New York city district, 13 from the Buffalo, 13 from the Albany, four from the Syracuse and 10 from the Rochester district.

Large Number of Fatal Falls

This month falls lead the list of causes of industrial fatalities with a total of 32. Among falls to a different level were nine falls on stairs causing fatal injuries to eight men and one woman. Four workers fell from scaffolds and two from ladders. Falls from other elevations included two from rooms, two from platforms and one from a trestle. A construction inspector fell into a ditch and a machinist fell into an open pit. Nine workers fell while working on level surfaces and one fall was reported without giving the location.

A total of 28 vehicle accidents were included in the March reports. Twenty-six of these were automobile casualties and two were railroad accidents. Eleven of the automobiles were in collisions and four skidded and overturned. Eleven workers were struck by motor vehicles while working on streets, highways, bridges and other traveled ways. A railroad worker fell from a freight car when he released the hand brake. A worker in a steel plant was struck by a train when he attempted to cross the tracks.

Fatal injuries due to handling objects were received by 16 industrial workers. Nine men and one woman strained themselves while lifting heavy and bulky objects and died from complications that developed after operations or from some systemic weakness. In four cases the objects handled slipped or broke apart and struck the workers. Two men died from infections that developed in wounds they received while handling containers that had sharp points on them.

Explosions, hot liquids and poisonous fumes took nine more lives. The explosions of two furnaces killed a fireman and a pipe fitter. Two drillers were fatally injured when they drilled into unfired dynamite blasts. A dyer in a knitting mill died from the infection of burns caused by boiling water that splashed from a vat. A molder was fatally burned while pouring some molten metal. Alcohol, ammonia and illuminating gas were the poisonous fumes responsible for three deaths in the harmful substances group.

Six machine and two elevator accidents were reported. Falling objects struck and killed six workers. Four men struck against objects and two stepped on tacks. The injuries of the latter though only slight became infected and both men died a short time after. A dairy worker was attacked and killed by a bull he was trying to lead into a pen. Three cases of shooting by robbers and two other acts of violence were recorded this month.

The meagre descriptions and absence of details as to the cause of accidents makes it difficult to give a complete analysis of many of the reports received each month. The above cases, however, are typical of those for which dependent survivors file compensation claims.

Mr. Elwyn is completing the final plans for Maverick for this summer and states that he will be returning with a considerable majority of last year's people in his troupe, together with some new talent. Unless prepared to give open and active support to efforts to preserve the peace in Europe, this government should not be concerned in them. Events Around The Empire State

Albany, N. Y., April 20 (AP)—A total of 132 workers in New York states lost their lives in March as the result of industrial accidents, Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews said yesterday.

Infections from stepping on tacks cost the lives of two workers. Vehicle accidents caused 28 deaths, falls 32, and explosions, hot liquids and poisonous fumes, nine.

Poland, N. Y., April 20 (AP)—A search was under way here today for the owners of four stray dogs that brought down and seriously wounded a doe in the center of this village yesterday.

The deer is under the care of district game protector John Rush who aided in rescuing the wounded animal. Three of the dogs were shot and the fourth driven away.

Albany, N. Y., April 20 (AP)—State income tax collections for the first four days exceeded those on the same day of 1934 by $1,000,000, Mark Graves, commissioner of taxation and finance, said last night.

"By the end of next week we expect to have definite information regarding the total amount of income tax collected by the state this year". The commissioner asserted. "Tabulation shows that $15,000,000 has been deposited in banks by the state from income tax returns. Nearly 160,000 returns have been checked and audited by the department of taxation and finance, but a number of these returns show that they are non-taxable.

"Last year the state collected about $45,000,000 in income tax. About 600,000 persons filed returns, but only 450,000 of these were taxable," he explained.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Wallace Beery usually goes into a scene calmly and matter-of-factly in the manner of a man who earns his bread and butter by playing scenes.

But he was far from calm the day that the screen's newest ash-blonde "sensation" made her bow to the camera. He was, as an onlooker described it, slightly less than jittery but much more than nervous. The little ash-blonde was about to receive her baptism of camera fire, and how she survived it meant a lot to burly Wally Beery.

That little Carol Ann Beery, Wally's adopted five-year-old daughter, survived the test is now part of screenland's human interest history. Her role in "China Seas" with her father is not important as a role, but as an introduction to the camera and to being a "really and truly" actress it is an epochal step. Wally Beery doubtless will give it his vote as the outstanding performance of 1935. As for Carol Ann, already she is looking for new fields to conquer.

Miss Beery Silenced

Carol Ann was so excited about "acting" that for an hour after her first scene—in which she was snatched by Clark Gable in the nick of time from the menace of a grand piano tossed about the salon of a ship during a typhoon—she was perfectly quiet and had little to say, both conditions being phenomenal in the life of Carol Ann. That night at dinner, reports Wally, she talked of nothing else.

Beery of late has made no secret of the fact that he hoped Carol Ann would want to be an actress. If he were her own father instead of a foster-father he could not be fonder of the child, and he thinks acting is one of the finest careers, replete with opportunities, a girl can follow. He never told Carol Ann his ambition for her.

Avoided Suggesting It

He wanted her to make up her own mind. He would take her about with him, almost every day would have her visiting on the set, letting her get acquainted with stars and technicians and all the people and things about a movie studio. All the while, however, he scrupulously refrained from suggesting that she might become a player too.

When he read the "China Seas" script and noted therein a bit for a little girl, he cautiously, casually broached the subject to Carol Ann. He just "thought maybe, if she wanted to," she could play that little girl.

And Carol Ann, no different from so many other girls little and big when offered a movie opportunity, clapped her hands.

Now Wally will have to find other roles for her, because Carol Ann is an actress, and an actress has to act.

THEY STILL TRY TO MANUFACTURE GOLD

Artificial Diamonds and Gold Age-Old Dream.

New York.—Down through the ages alchemists and scientists have sought to manufacture diamonds and gold. These efforts never have been successful commercially. A recent report from London that a new method of making diamonds had been discovered recalled to old-time diamond men here the long list of attempts to create the gems artificially.

The first to attempt the manufacture of diamonds were the alchemists of the Middle ages, who labored tirelessly for centuries. It was believed in their day that a word might be discovered of such potency that its mere repetition would create diamonds, and also transform lead into gold. With the development of chemistry the ancient problem was attacked more scientifically.

They Use Explosions.

One of the most elaborate attempts was made by Sir William Crookes who exploded cordite in closed steel cylinders under a pressure of 8,000 atmospheres at a temperature of 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit. He thus obtained tiny crystals which he thought were diamonds, and which had some of the properties of the natural stone, but were not of the slightest commercial value.

Another elaborate attempt was made by Sir Charles Parsons who subjected carbon to a pressure of 15,000 atmospheres, but without making diamonds. Moissan, the French scientist, carried on similar experiments with the same disappointing results.

Two German scientists, Drs. Von Hamlinger and Wolf, after years of labor, announced that they had produced diamonds by crystalizing magnesium silicate, but the process has been forgotten. A French engineer, Guyot de Boismen, attacked the problem electrically and believed for a time he had made a diamond nearly one-eighth of an inch in size, but failed to develop any practical method. A similar futile announcement was made recently by a professor at Columbia university.

Exhaustive tests made in German universities show that while microscopic crystals resembling diamonds may be made at great expense there is no proof that real diamonds ever have been made or that they ever will be made. The tiny diamond-like crystals thus formed never have the beauty of the diamond and only resemble it in hardness. The only possible use for such so-called diamonds is to crush them to form diamond dust to be used for abrasive purposes, and diamonds of this kind are plentiful and cheap.

Despite the countless efforts to change the base metals into gold and to transform carbon into diamonds, gold remains gold and diamonds still are diamonds.

PREVIEWED

Today

Broadway: "Naughty Marietta". A new and radical departure from the ordinary motion picture musical takes place in this elaborate production, for it is filled with excitement, soldiers, pirates, Indians, battles, in fact everything one usually associates with thrills and danger. And to top it all, the show has without question two of the finest singing voices ever recorded on a sound track, the talented and beautiful Jeannette MacDonald and the equally talented and likable Nelson Eddy, fresh from the legitimate stage. Together they sing their way through one of the most colorful and tuneful of all the Victor Herbert operettas, supported by a cast of hundreds of players and well planned sets. Much of the production's success lies in the brilliance of Director W. S. Van Dyke, and the musical direction of Herbert Stothart is also helpful. It's about a French princess about to be forced into an unhappy marriage who escapes to the new America and falls in love with a young captain. The plot isn't anything novel but Director Van Dyke, who also made the famous "Thin Man", supplies the adventure in such quantity and skill that the entire film fairly bristles with action. This, plus the really beautiful singing, makes the picture of rare entertainmen value, the best picture of its kind to ever grace the creen "Naughty Marietta" is don't miss entertainment.

Orpheum: "Ready for Love" and "Fighting Trooper." A good cast of Paramount's veteran troopers makes the first offering amusing and entertaining film fare. It's all about a newspaper owner who mistakes a young woman for the inamorata of the town's leading citizen. Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Marjorie Rambeau and Trent Durkin are among the featured players. "Fighting Trooper" is a fast paced action drama with Ken Maynard.

Kingston: "The Perfect Clue" and "The Silver Streak". Mystery shrouds the opening attraction, for death strikes and leaves a peculiar clue to work out the murderer behind the crime. Most of the play is a grim search for reasons and methods behind the crime but there are a few bright momonts with the ever cheerful Skeets Gallagher playing one of his most engaging parts. David Manners and Betty Blythe are also in the cast. "Silver Streak" glorifies the new stream lined train as it dashes across the country in a melodramatic setting, in a race against death, for it must reach Boulder Dam in order to avert a tragedy. Charles Starrett, Sally Blane, Hardie Albright, William Farnum and Edgar Kennedy are in the cast.

Tomorrow

Broadway: Same.

Orpheum: "Sweepstake Annie". A poor girl gets fortunate and wins a fortune in a sweepstakes and she soon discovers that many people are willing to help her spend it. This is an enjoyable, comical talkie, with Tom Brown, Marion Nixon in the featured roles. Other subjects include the serial "Phantom Empire" and selected short subjects.

Kingston: "The Wedding Night". A Polish girl, living in the tobacco fields of Connecticut with her parents, follows tradition and is affianced to a Polish boy with the usual dowry of horses and land thrown into the bargain. Into this setting comes a handsome novelist, tired of the city and seeking new plot ideas. He writes of the Polish people in this part of Connecticut and romance flares up with the pretty Polish girl who is about to marry another. Of course, the novelist left a wife in the city and the eternal triangle enters the scene. A tragic ending completes the play, and Anna Sten again proves her capabilities as an actress. Directed by King Vidor, the cast offers Gary Cooper, Ralph Bellamy, Helen Vinson, and Siegfred Rumann.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE E. JAGGER

New York, April 20 (AP).—The stock market struck a fast upward gait today as traders returned from their Good Friday holiday in a decidedly bullish mood. Gains of 1 to nearly 3 points were numerous despite some late profit taking. The close was fairly strong, transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

It was one of the liveliest Saturday sessions in about a year. The industrialists, especially those of the investment type, showed the widest advances, although the rails and utilities were firm.

Among the most acive share gainers were American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Case, International Harvester, U. S. Smelting, Allied Chemical, Houdaille-Hershey, Santa Fe, Woolworth, Columbian Carbon and Westinghouse.

The Banner of Chic

Paris, April 20 (AP).—Veils will be the banner of chic on Easter bonnets which make their debut tomorrow at church services or the races at Auteuil. Three quarters of the new hats delivered to fashionable Parisians are ornamented with veils used in a great variety of ways. There are wheel veils, perched on top of silk toques, old fashioned automobile veils which float back from wide brimmed hats, and little standing "paint brush" veils trim other bonnets. Flower toques and flower trims on costumes will be great favorites in tomorrow's fashion parade. One Parisian has ordered a toque of scarlet geraniums to wear with a grey crepe dress. Another has a toque covered with blue hyacinth petals to accompany a navy blue taffeta frock.

Police Radio Station To Be Operating Soon

The engineer in charge of the installation of the police department radio broadcasting station expects that the station will be ready for operation shortly. The huge mast to be placed on the city hall tower will be positioned Monday it was stated by John Hermann, who has the contract to place the pole.

This morning's mail also brought third class radio licenses to several of the members of the police department who recently took the examination held at the city hall. It was expected that all of the ten men who took the examination will pass and be granted licenses to operate the station.

Dart "World Series" To Be Played April 24

The grand finish of the Dart Ball Leagues will take place Wednesday night, April 24, at the Fair Street Reformed Church.

The winners of the National League (St. Remy), and the winners of the American League (Congregational), will play the "world series."

The St. Remy Club after a playoff with the St. Paul Club won the pennant of the National League while the Congregationals won the pennant in the American League without a playoff. Both of these clubs are considered good. St. Remy won 46 games and lost 20 during the season and the Congregationals won 50 and lost 16 games.

St. Remy was one of the contestants in the playoff a year ago and lost the trophy to Connelly. This year they are again one of the contestants in the finals and next Wednesday will show whether they take the cup this season or not.

It is expected that a crowd of some 500 men will be present. A good time is promised. Refreshments will be sold.

Amelia Earhart On Flight To Mexico

Mexico, D. F., April 20 (AP).—Amelia Earhart flew over the city of Tepic at 9:29 a. m. (10:29 a. m., E.S.T.) today on her non-stop flight from Los Angeles to the Mexican capital, wireless dispatches from her plane disclosed. She had previously radioed she expected to land about noon.

The flier wirelessed that there were a few clouds over the mountains, but reports here indicated perfect weather between Guadalajara and the capital.

Tepic, capital of the state of the same name, is slightly over 400 miles northwest of Mexico, D. F., inland a short distance from the Pacific coast.

County Court Session Will Be Held Monday

Seek Another Creature.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 20 (AP).—Flushed with their success in uncovering a 250,000,000-year-old scaly sea hedgehog, a group of Cornell University fossil sleuths today start an expedition to track down remains of another creature of the same vintage. The group, 10 students headed by Dr. Kenneth E. Caster, Cornell paleontologist, plans to scour the territory near Susquehanna, Pa., for traces of a lizard-like creature known as paraphibius.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, April 20 (AP) — The position of the treasury on April 18 was: Receipts, $10,951,224.74; expenditures, $66,735,727.56; balance, $2,124,626,447.53; customs receipts for the month, $19,956,473.65. Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $3,027,976,944.02; expenditures, $5,562,356,918.52 (including $2,801,001,282.09 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $2,534,379,974.50; gold assets, $8,672,104,452.59.

Reports Unfounded

Doorn, Netherlands, April 20 (AP).—Reports that former Kaiser Wilhelm was ill were described here today as absolutely unfounded. Dispatches from Amsterdam saying two doctors had been summoned to examine the aged former emperor lacked confirmation here.

Origin of Sheep Obscure; Formerly Had Two Coats

The origin of sheep is rather obscure, notes a writer in the Montreal Herald. Archeological discoveries have shown that in prehistoric times there was an animal called the "mouflon," similar in type to the South American Yak with a coarse shaggy coat. Ill adapted to life on the plains, the mouflon was gradually driven back to the hills. Mankind found these animals of great practical use, and as they were domesticated the early sheep men bred for size since the large animals provided skins of sufficient size to cover a single person without any attempt at tailoring; also they selected for breeding purposes the animals with the softest wool since these were most comfortable when worn next the body.

Primitive sheep had two coats, the outer hairy coat which served as a protective covering and the inner coat of softer, finer fiber which kept the animal warm. This inner covering of softer, finer fiber was the forerunner of the present day wool and by careful selection and breeding the outer hairy coat was gradually eliminated entirely. But even in the sheep of today there are still traces of this outer hairy coat which persists in the form of coarse brittle fibers known as kemp, which is especially noticeable in some mountain breeds, and is also found on newly born lambs, although soon after birth it becomes lost in the breeds that produce the finest wool.

Magnetic Compass Guided by Magnetism of Earth

The action of the magnetic compass depends upon the attraction of the earth's magnetic force. The earth is a great magnet, with one pole in the neighborhood of 70 degrees north latitude, and 95 degrees west longitude, and the other near 72 degrees south latitude and 155 degrees east longitude.

These poles are not points, asserts a writer in the Indianapolis News, but areas over which the vertical intensity of the magnetic force is practically the same; and they are constantly but slowly changing their positions. Within these areas a freely suspended magnet hangs nearly or exactly vertical. As we recede from the magnetic poles, freely suspended magnets change from a vertical position until, on the magnetic equator (which is nowhere more than 15 degrees from the geographic equator) they are horizontal.

A magnet which is constrained to move only in a horizontal plane will point nearly toward the magnetic pole. Its direction in different parts of the world has been carefully ascertained and tabulated; so that if we know the magnetic direction of a ship's course, we can ascertain the true geographical direction by applying a correction, which is called the variation or declination, and which is the angle between magnetic north and true north.

Competition From Shoguns

The mikado was not a ruler by divine right, with absolute power, through all the centuries. The shoguns gave such competition for the exercise of authority that often and long the mikado was more or less of a figurehead. From 1600 A. D. to 1868, the shoguns apparently had more power than he did. It was the Meiji restoration in 1868 that put the mikado in his present high and unquestioned place of power and authority, although it is hinted that the wealthy descendants of the old shoguns or feudal lords of ancient time now control the great industrial and commercial corporations, and these corporations wield wide influence in the administration of Japan's government.

New Jersey Foreigners

The saying that New Jersey is a foreign state comes down from the time when Joseph Bonaparte, ex-king of Spain and Naples, after the downfall of Napoleon, sought an asylum in the United States. As an alien he was obliged to obtain a special act of legislature to enable him to hold real estate. Pennsylvania refused, but New Jersey consented and he established himself in princely magnificence at Bordentown. Hence men of other states used humorously to declare that the Jerseymen, with their foreign prince, were foreigners.

Feature of Scottish Life

One of the most picturesque features of Scottish life is that of the Highland games, the annual gathering of the tartaned members of the famous Highland clans, at which the pipers play the traditional Scottish tunes and there are competitions in the ancient Highland sports and dances. The most noted of these is at Braemar, near Balmoral, the Scottish castle of the king, where royalty attends.

Second Residence of Hapsburgs

Budapest, capital city of Hungary, was the second residence of the Hapsburgs. Its gayety is proverbial and its palaces and public buildings line spacious boulevards. The beauty of this city is enhanced by the fact that the Danube cuts through its center, dividing it into Buda on the one side and Pest on the other.

Abyssinians Inhabited Present Home for Ages

The Abyssianians, the Ethiopians of the ancient world, have inhabited their present mountainous tableland surrounding the headwaters of the blue Nile since before the dawn of history. In early times, says a correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune, they were more or less connected with the Egyptians of the upper Nile and afterward assimilated incursions of the Hebrews at the time of the Egyptian captivity; the Phenicians, from whom they are said to have derived their alphabet, and the Greeks who had planted colonies along their seacoat. Christianity was introduced in the Fourth century and gradually spread throughout the land. This primitive faith, mixed with many customs of Judaism, is the principal religion there today.

In the Seventh century the Mahommedans conquered all of Egypt and the Abyssinian coastal possessions. The Abyssinians were driven into the interior mountain fastnesses, there to remain nearly a thousand years until their very existence was almost forgotten. About 1500 a Portuguese expedition seeking a mythical eastern Christian kingdom penetrated the country and entered into a relationship sufficiently friendly to permit the establishment of missions. To these Portuguese belong the credit for many churches, bridges and other public works constructed at the time and also to the fanatical zeal of their priests must be attributed the destruction of the ancient literature the Abyssinians are said to have had. This domination of the missionaries lasted nearly a century and a half, when religious disputes arose and the Portuguese were driven out, the Abyssinians again retiring to remain in seclusion until about the middle of the last century.

Red, White and Blue Are Popular Hues for Flags

Red, white and blue, colors that come into the minds of people whenever flags are mentioned, are the most popular hues, it happens, for the flags of the world, says a writer in the Montreal Herald. Red is used more generally than any other color in flag-making, followed in order by white and blue. Next in order, but much less popular than the three leaders, are yellow, green and black. Orange, which appears in the banners of three countries, about exhausts the colors used in the world's flags. One country (Spain) uses purple. Brown does not appear on any national flag.

Astronomical devices are favorites of flag-makers. Stars are used by many countries and there are suns and moons, the latter usually in the form of crescents. Brazil makes use of a circle of the firmament showing the Southern Cross and neighboring stars and the Southern Cross also appears in the flags of Australia and New Zealand. Alaska has placed on its flag the Great Dipper and Pole star.

Other countries use characteristic symbols—Afghanistan, a mosque; Cambodia, an eastern temple; the Republic of Lebanon, a cedar; the Papal state, crossed keys and triple crown; Germany, a swastika; Siam, white elephant; and the Soviet union, a hammer and sickle. Tibet shows the sun rising over a snowy mountain.

Scandal Seems Capped.

Columbus, O., April 20 (AP).—Ohio's relief scandal, a potential volcano which threatened to erupt with disastrous political consequences, appeared today to have been capped by Postmaster General James A. Farley. Smoke continues to pour from two investigations, but the fires of controversy that were fanned by the charges and counter charges of Gov. Martin L. Davey and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, have cooled. Both have been noticeably quiet since Francis W. Poulson, Democratic state chairman, visited Farley two weeks ago.

TVA Hopes For Victory.

Washington, April 19 (AP).—The Tennessee valley authorities is going ahead with its power plans in the apparent hope that the new deal can ward off the blow aimed at this program by Federal Judge W. I. Grubb of Alabama. Judge Grubb enjoinded the sale of TVA power from Wilson Dam to 14 Alabama communities. Since that time, TVA officials said today, there has been no increase in electric power outlets, but there has been no letdown in the construction of the series of federal power dams in which Uncle Sam already has invested at least $90,000,000.

Ray of Hope For Gold Diggers.

Chicago, April 20 (AP).—There is still a ray of hope for gold-diggers in Illinois, even though most "love suits" will be outlawed as soon as Governor Horner signs the bill recently passed by the general assembly. The little lady who misplaces her trust can still call the offending gentleman into court, and lawyers say she can unfold the same story she would tell in a breach of promise suit, even introducing the usual sheaf of letters. The open door to court action is a suit for seduction. If the facts support it and the plaintiff is willing to confide in a jury. Suits of this sort are banned in the Indiana law which started the movement against love law suits, but the Illinois statute lets them stand.

Mass Aviation Recruiting.

(Copyright, 1935, By Associated Press)

Rome, April 20—What aviation officials said was the "biggest annual recruiting of aviators ever held in the world" began today as a flood of applications poured into the air ministry for 1,300 pilots' posts and 4,750 specialist mechanics. Previous recruiting in Italy never exceeded 400 pilots annually. It also was learned that in May there will be a gradual temporary recall to military service of hundreds of pilots and specialists of the reserve. By these measures Italy is moving toward rapid formation of a reserve of 10,000 pilots which Premier Mussolini, as air minister, believes is necessary for defense of the kingdom. It was likewise revealed that construction has just begun on 120 tri-motored bombing planes at Savoia of a type capable of carrying 3,300 pounds of explosives over a radius of 1,500 miles. Mussolini inspected machine construction at Sesto Colende last week on his way to Stresa and gave his approval.

The crash occurred early last evening as Loomis was en route from Newark, N. J., to Syracuse. A veteran commercial pilot with 1,000 flying hours to his credit, Loomis made an attempt to bring the plane down safely in the heavily wooded territory as his motor went bad.

Spenders of Billions

4. Hopkins—The Nonconformist

Fourth and last in a series.

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Washington (AP)—Lean, brisk Harry L. Hopkins, who will help direct the $5,000,000,000 work-relief program, can take his official conventions or leave them alone.

This 44-year-old social worker, who put 4,000,000 men to work in the civil works program, probably has paid less attention to precedent than any other man in Washington—and official dignity still rests lightly upon him.

Probably terming himself a non-compromist, he has given democratic party regulars a few headaches by his outspoken comments — for instance, the time be described Upton Sinclair's nomination in California as "great business."

Gets Things Done

He brings to his new job this same outspokeness that two years of handling relief and spending around $2,000,000,000 have not stilled, a Puckish mixture of idealism and tough-fibred realism and a reputation for getting things done in a hurry.

Tall, young-looking, perhaps he more nearly speaks the average man's vernacular than any other "new dealist." Many time he publicly has abhorred "politics" of the patronage sort, and despite a number of collisions with members of congress he has retained an unusual popularity with them. He never has hesitated to "dress down" officials with whom he came to blows in print. One example was his blast at Governor Talmadge of Georgia:

"All that guy is after is headlines."

Subordinates Like Him

In all his stay here Hopkins has worked in a bare—almost shabby—office without the gilded trappings usually found in the headquarters of men of such position. There he has labored sometimes until midnight, planning, arguing, sometimes issuing ultimatums. Subordinates think the world of him, partly because he never hesitates to "go to bat" for them. He insisted on running the relief administration as he saw fit and declined the opportunity to have a special legal department, figuring the regular justice department attorneys were good enough for him.

Hopkins has a lot of fun along with all the work. He likes cards, plays a fair game of golf, goes to horse races and prize fights when he can spare the time—and reads poetry.

Harry L. Hopkins—a mixture of realism and high idealism—gets things done in a hurry—is a master of repartee—likes horse races, prizefights — and poetry.

Plowed Into House.

Babylon, New York, April 20 (AP).—A heavily loaded five-ton milk truck travelling at high speed got out of control on the Merrick road here early today, plowed into the house of Augustus Haff, drenched the living room furniture with milk and went on through another wall to knock Haff out of the bath tub into the kitchen. The truck had imbedded itself so completely in the dwelling that it was necessary to call in the services of a house-wrecking firm to get it out. Neither Haff nor the driver, Frank Albino, of 1358 69th street, Brooklyn, was seriously injured. The impact of the accident was heard a mile away, and it was necessary to call state police to untangle the traffic when a crowd of nearly 1,000 persons gathered at the scene. Both the house chimneys were leveled. Several other members of the household, asleep in other rooms, were uninjured.

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

Time is Eastern Standard.

New York, April 20 (AP).—The official reception, with President Roosevelt and others participating, to the returning Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his second South Polar Expedition, is to be the subject of some rather elaborate broadcasting.

The reception will take place in the Washington Navy Yard aboard the Bear, supply ship of the expedition, followed by other ceremonies on shore. Both NBC and CBS plan to have plenty of microphone equipment on hand. May 10 has been set for the expedition's arrival home.

To provide a more complete broadcast of the pontificial Easter Mass from the Vatican on Sunday, both NBC and CBS have advanced their time of transmission to 5:30 a. m., 15 minutes earlier than previously planned. The broadcast will include benediction by Pope Pius.

FLASHES OF LIFE SKETCHED IN BRIEF

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shades of 1773

New York—The government was the sponsor, not the target, of the New York tea party.

It dumped 3,500 chests of tea valued at $75,000 into the sea. The tea, damaged by smoke and water during a fire, had been ruled unfit for human consumption.

Astrologists Take Note

Carlisle, Pa.—If you are hoping for fame, consider the month of your birth.

Dr. E. C. Herber of Dickinson College told the Pennsylvania Academy of Science that August appears to have produced the largest number of famous persons; May, the least.

The conclusions resulted from a study of 40,000 prominent persons.

Order Unfilled

Charleston, W. Va.—A printing company got an order for a plate to "print good $5 bills". The letter offered "a good price" for such a plate.

A federal agent posed as a printing company representative and now D. C. Villiconi is under arrest as the writer.

Golly.

Kansas City—Tex Clark, superintendent of the Swope Park Zoo, had been pondering a long time over a name for a four-month old grizzly bear. He had turned down all suggestions as "too common," until a group of children came by the bear's cage.

"Golly," exclaimed one, "isn't it cute?"

"Golly, it is," said Clark, "until the bear grows up and then we will call it by its full name 'Goliath'."

Duck Relief

Spokane, Wash.—Maurice Ahlquist wants immediate relief from ducks.

Thomas A. E. Lally, chairman of the state game commission, said he had received a complaint that a great flock of wild ducks resting on an irrigation stream had caused it to overflow its ditch and flood Ahlquist's ranch near Walla Walla.

Memorial Day Committees Named

At a meeting of the general committee which will have in charge the plans for the observance of Memorial Day in Kingston, met in the Legion Memorial building on Friday evening, April 19, at which time Past Commander Morton Finch of the American Legion was chosen as chairman with James M. Krom of the Sons of Union Veterans as secretary. Both have served very ably in the past in the office to which they were again elected. Mayor C. J. Heiselman was elected honorary chairman of the committee.

Following the election of chairman and secretary the following committee chairmen were appointed: Program, Prof. B. C. Van Ingen; music, Edward Wortman; publicity, Eugene Cornwell. In selecting a parade marshall Major O. R. Hiltebrant was the choice of the committee.

At other meetings to be held definite plans will be made and the various organizations contacted in order that a good showing may be made in the parade, and at the exercises following the parade in the Municipal Auditorium.

The secretary reported that the number of graves to be decorated would probably be over 1,000 and as the number increases each year it was felt that the appropriation to cover the cost of the graves decoration would have to be increased in the coming years. A committee plans to meet with the building and supply committee of the Common Council in regard to the number of plants and flags needed at which time it is expected the matter of appropriation will be discussed.

The following organizations with their representative were present: Tappen Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, Commander Charles Walter, Joy S. Ross, James M. Krom; Joyce-Schirick, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Commander John L. Greene, Edward Wortman; Italian American Club, Ralph Arena; Commander Lester Elmendorf and Past Commanders Morton Finch and Roy Jacob of the American Legion.

Legionnaires And Visitations In Basketball "Natural" At The Municipal Auditorium Wednesday

"Those Visitation speedsters are fast movers but we will try to beat them at their own game," said Captain Carlie Husta of the Kingston Legionnaires when questioned on his version of next Wednesday's clash on the Municipal Auditorium court with the probable American League champions.

Captain Husta continued with this thought "They will probably play Frank Conaty and Bob McDermott up front which means that Shimek and I will have to take care of them. Conaty is a clever boy with his hands and an exceptionally good passer. Donlon uses him for their bucket man and he gets that ball away fast to the man cutting, who is usually Carlie Johnson or Berenson, the two guards. Johnson is used mostly outside and also plays the backfield and with his speed brings the ball down the court exceptionally fast. Carlie Johnson is a brother of Sure-shot Johnson, who played with Honey Russell's Albany State League club during the past season. We plan to match these youngsters with experienced skill and speed and hope to wind up the season with a victory."

Besides watching the four youngsters move around, a battle of veteran center-men is in prospect for next Wednesday night. Howie Bollerman is as big a basketball player that ever appeared on a local court. He must stand about six-foot-six and weighs about 250 pounds. Some five or six years ago when the famous Passaic High School wonder team was in its hey-dey, it was Bollerman, playing center for Hackensack High, who was mainly instrumental in snapping the Passaic team's consecutive string of victories. He is now teaching school in New York city. Al Kellet, the big Kingston center-man, will have his hands full taking care of the immense blond school-master.

Played in the Best

Some of the greatest basketball contests ever staged on the old Armory court featured the Visitation Triangles and the Kingston clubs. In those Metropolitan league days it was Bob Griebe, center, Red Conaty, brother of Frank now playing for Visitation, and Joe Brennan, forwards; Rody Cooney and Willie Scrill, guards. Manager Donlon had a comparatively light team then but they were speedsters and fighters from the word go. Probably two of the scrappiest basketball players that ever stepped on a court were Willie Scrill and Joe Brennan. Rody Cooney would also fight at the drop of a hat. Who will forget the time that he and Benny Borgman tangled in a battle of fists."

The present Visitations, who have dropped the Triangle name but still wear it on their uniforms, are predicated on the same type of ball club. John Donlon, who has guided the destinies of the Visitations for many, many years, likes scrappy ball players and his present team is not set-up in that direction.

Rody Cooney is still a member of the club but has been relegated to a reserve position due to the coming-up of youngsters who can outspeed him. Rody, a basketball coach of most, probably furnishes plenty of the master-minding for the club.

Game Creating Interest.

The contest seems to be what is termed a "natural" in the sports parlance. Visitations are expected to trim the Jewels in the final game of the American League championship play-off tomorrow night at Prospect Hall, Brooklyn, and are the standout club of that circuit right now. The Legionnaires, due to recent victories over Rennaissance, Original Celtics and Phil'adelphia Hebrews, are the only ones to threaten their supremacy. Wednesday night's game will be a battle of titans with little to choose between them.

Pete Sinnott will handle the referee's job and that means a well officiated game. Undoubtedly some of the games at the Auditorium have been somewhat spoiled by mediocre officiating, but with Sinnott handling the whistle the fans are satisfied.

The reserved seat sale is exceptionally heavy with reservations in not only from Kingston but all over the county. The advance reserved seat is now taking place at the Legion building and telephone orders will be held until 8:30 the night of the game.

Erne's Orchestra.

It is planned to start the big game at promptly 8:45. The Visitation management has promised to have the club ready to go at that time. With the game getting under way at that time, two full hours of dancing will be possibel. Erne's Imperial Broadcasting Orchestra has been secured to furnish the music.

A preliminary game featuring the Kendalls and a strong opposing team will start at 7:30. Efforts are being made to bring the Z. N. P. quintet in as their opponents but Manager "Dolly" Tessio has not given his consent yet. The Kendalls are particularly anxious to get another crack at the Z. N. P. to endeavor to avenge a defeat hung on them at White Eagle Hall recently. The Coughlin outfit figures it can take its opponents into camp on the bigger Auditorium court.

At Atlantic City Tonight.

The Legionnaires are participating in what is billed as "World's Professional Basketball Championships" at Young's Million-Dollar Pier, Atlantic City, over the week-end. The contending clubs are the Philadelphia Hebrews, Atlantic City Sandpipers of the Eastern League, Brooklyn Visitations and Kingston Legionnaires.

Two games will be played tonight and two Monday night, with the winners of tonight's games playing each other Monday and the losers playing eich other.

Manager Frank Morgenweck will have his regular lineup of Hank Kurtyka and Moe Spahn, forwards, Al Kellet, center, Captain Carl Husta and Frank Shimek, guards. Bill Hamilton and Corky Stanton will furnish the reserve strength.

It is expected that owing to the Easter holiday the tournament will attract immense crowds.

Hand Wrestling Is Problem for Yankee

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

Lincoln, Neb., (AP).—Because it's hands—across the sea—and not legs, as in the United States—wrestlers seeking berths on the American Olympics team are busy perfecting their style to tonform with Olympic rules.

American amateur wrestlers, primarily leg artists, could leave their arms in the locker room and still give a creditable performance. Foreign wrestlers, specializing in arm and hand work, use their legs merely to stand on as long as possible.

The difference in rules accounts for this difference in styles, says Dr. R. G. Clapp, director of physical education for men at the University of Nebraska and secretary of the American Olympic wrestling committee.

The two major differences appear minor to the casual observer, but to the wrestler they amount to the difference between apple pie with and without the apples. Olympic rules provide for the instantaneous fall, and ban the hooking of feet in scissors holds.

Taking the hook from the scissors destroys its effectiveness, Dr. Clapp points out. The instantaneous fall makes leg wrestling too dangerous for the aggressor, who might be all ready to tie his opponent into bow knots through adroit use of the lower limbs, only to have his own shoulders touch the mat simultaneously for a fleet instant.

Other differences between Olympic rules and American rules are minor, Dr. Clapp said. Certain holds such as the toe hold and double nelson, or any hold which endangers life or limb are barred under all rules.

Despite inability to use their favorite leg holds with safety, American wrestlers have won the wrestling division in the last two Olympics. In 1932, they won three matches and placed second in two.

May Permit Tennis Playing On Sundays at Forsyth Park

The question of allowing the playing of tennis on Sunday on the Forsyth Park tennis courts has been considered by the Board of Public Works for several years. Under the provisions of the deed conveying the park to the city for playground purposes there was inserted in the deed a clause that prohibited the playing of Sunday games in the park. If games were allowed on Sunday the park reverted to the Forsyth estate.

That clause proved a stumbling block in the path of tennis fans who wanted to play the game on Sundays. The question was first agitated during the administration of Eugene E. Carey as mayor, but nothing was done in the matter on account of the clause in the deed of the park to the city.

Last year the question again came up before the Board of Public Works and it was referred to the corporation counsel. Since then the corporation counsel has been in touch with the heirs of the Forsyth estate, and it is understood that all of them have signed papers permitting the playing of Sunday tennis in the park.

The matter has not been officially brought to the attention of the board, but undoubtedly it will be taken up at the May meeting and action taken.

Until the board officially allows Sunday tennis no games will be allowed in Forsyth Park.

It is now planned to open the tennis courts both in Forsyth Park and Hasbrouck Park on Wednesday, May 1.

Sunday Baseball Here

The park committee of the Board of Public Works has been busy arranging the baseball schedule for the diamonds in Hasbrouck Park and Block Park.

The North Rondout Social Club has been granted the privilege of opening the Sunday baseball season at Hasbrouck Park on Sunday, April 28, while the Dier All Stars will open the Sunday season at Block Park on Sunday, May 5.

It is expected that the usual custom of opening the city park on Decoration Day will be observed this year and that the playground equipment will be ready for use at that time.

The Ins and Outs of Boxing

A Series of Stories

By Vince Coffey

TODAY: SGT. PHINNEY HELPS OUT.

Sergeant Charles Phinney of the Kingston police and I first met about twenty years ago when he was patrolling the 13th ward on horseback. Jimmy Kenny and I were running a foot race up Wilbur avenue. As usual I was losing and in the rear. The policeman asked me if I was being chased. I replied that Jimmy was being chased.

Subsequent meetings revealed our mutual interest in physical culture, boxing and wrestling. His opinions on training were most helpful, and were used to my advantage during the years I boxed.

After the World War, boxing became popular because of the important part it played in a soldier's training, and also because of General Pershing's endorsement of the sport.

Was a Good Trainer.

Early in 1919 bouts were arranged for me and I appealed to Sergeant Phinney for help in training. We went to a local gymnasium almost daily, and our afternoon workout consisted of setting up exercises for 10 minutes, and 15 minutes tossing the medicine ball. The sergeant's method of working with the medicine ball consisted of starting at a distance of 60 feet and advancing a step with each throw until we were so close that one or the other would be on the floor from the impact of the ball. After this we would wrestle from 30 to 60 minutes. I was never able to gain one fall.

A foot race of two miles followed wrestling. This was strenuous exercise and not the best training for boxing, but I never lost a bout in the days when the sergeant and I worked together.

Mr. Phinney had gymnasium personality and attracted a crowd of spectators. Many returned to pit their skill against his and went away sadder but wiser. Until after his 41st birthday the sergeant did his daily strenuous work.

A Trick On The Sarge.

In the gymnasium the Sarge was a very rough person. He didn't care what he did to others, and cared less what they did to him.

After being tossed about the gymnasium day after day and having the head-lock and scissors holds applied so effectively, I resorted to a little trickery. Before going into the gymnasium, I had my body massaged with cocoa butter. I had not shaved for several days and my beard was like a rasp having been hardened with tincture of iron. My hair was prepared to do its part too, for it had been soaked in alkali, making it like barbed wire.

After the setting up exercises I bgan to perspire and managed with my greasy skin to slip from the headlock. The sergeant worked harder than usual that day and each time I slipped away my head and whiskers left scratches. After about 40 minutes of this we called it a day. The sergeant did not question me regarding the scratches and I have never told him prior to writing this piece.

Mr. Phinney reflects good humor and kindness and his vim and vigor should be sufficient reasons for any one to find pleasure in exercise.

Chance Sun Looks Like Derby Favorite

Louisville, Ky., April 20 (AP).—The long shot players and the sure thing boys took stock of the Kentucky Derby hopefuls today and decided there was plenty of room for argument.

The arguments, they agreed, may have more to bite on one week from today when Churchill Downs opens its spring meeting. After the nominees match strides in some actual racing there will be a broader base of comparison.

The derby, two weeks from today, probably will see Chance Sun, favorite since the close of his highly successful juvenile season, go to the post the odd-on favorite. But from here the race appears to be wide open. Some of the wise boys have gone so far as to offer a dollar or so that Chance Sun will not finish in the money.

NORTH RONDOUT SOCIALS WILL PRACTICE SUNDAY, 10:30

The North Rondout Social Club will practice Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock at Hasbrouck Park. All members of the ball team are requested to be out for the drill.

Jamaica Season Opens.

New York, April 20 (AP).—With increased purses and general interest auguring the most successful season in recent years, the metropolitan racing season opened at Jamaica today with seventeen sprinters, five of them eligible for the Kentucky derby, named for the $5,000 Paumonok Handicap. Of chief interest in the Paumonok was the initial appearance of the season of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Psychic Bid and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Sailor Beware.

Legion Favors Beichert's Move For Erection Of Outdoor Stadium

An outdoor athletic stadium for Kingston is the aim of the American Legion of Kingston Post, Friday night, at the Memorial Building.

The resolution was introduced by P. Joseph Beichert, business manager of the Legionnaires, basketball champions of the New York State League, who has been a sports enthusiast all his life and is a staunch member of the Legion.

Beichert's resolution calls for the erection of the stadium as an ERB project.

The introduction of the resolution at the Legion meeting was received favorably, and Commander Lester C. Elmendorf ordered the public relations committee to contact the city's various service clubs, other civic organizations and the press, concerning the matter.

Following the findings of the committee, the proposition will be taken up with Mayor C. J. Heiselman for further action.

At the meeting it was voted to give the Legionnaire basketball team and the Visitations a banquet at the Pool rooms after the game between the two clubs at the Municipal Auditorium, Wednesday evening, April 24.

Guest of honor at the dinner will be President John J. O'Brien, of the American Basketball League.

Matchmaker John J. Finerty, who reported on the boxing bouts promoted by Kingston Post, saying the two shows run to date have been successful. He expects the card of scraps next Friday to draw a record house, he said in addressing the Legion members, because five local boys are on it.

Foxx Likes Catching Better Than 1st Base

Thinks Playing the Plate Will Improve His Batting—Figures He Won't Be So Restless Before Batting Now.

New York, April 20 (AP).—James Emory Foxx, considerable of a first baseman at one time, likes catching for the Athletics much better, but one of the reasons is hard to guess.

"With all that equipment on me," he explains, I'm about the only one on the ball field able to keep warm in this cold weather. That helps a lot."

He's caught only three games of the new season, all there have been, and there has been no sign so far of the falling off in batting power the experts predicted would come from his shift from first base to the catcher's box. He has hit two home runs in three games, indicating that the search for his successor as the home run king might be a bit premature.

Foxx likes catching better than first basing because he feels he's in the game more. He feels it's an ideal spot from which to captain the team, though he admits frankly that there's no great mental gymnastics required of him.

"All I do is carry orders from the boss—Connie Mack."

As for hitting, Jimmie thinks he'll better last year's .334 and will play in about 135 games behind the plate.

"One of the troubles I've always had in hitting is over-swinging," he said. "There isn't a great deal of action around first base and when I get to the plate I'm too eager.

"I figure that catching is a lot harder work. It will take more out of me. I won't be so restless at the plate. I'm not liable to over-swing so much, and so I ought to hit better."

The grind of catching isn't liable to bother him a great deal. He weighs 185 now, is strong as a moose, and never has trouble with his weight.

Assignment To Mexico City Cup Matches 'Biggest Chance' For Littlest Tenniser

By E. K. BUTLER

Atlanta (AP)—An ambition that's taller than he is finally has rewarded Bryan M. Grant, Jr., the "Atlanta Atom" known to the tennis world as "Bitsy".

When the Davis cup selection committee decided to give Bitsy his chance in actual cup competition—a singles assignment in the American zone play at Mexico City in May—he became the smallest man ever to win a United States Davis cup berth.

The 5-foot-4, 120-pound gazelle of the courts is slightly shorter and lighter than that famous mighty midget of America's halcyon tennis days, "Little Bill" Johnston, and Grant hopes to prove size is no more necessary in tennis greatness now than in Johnston's day.

"This is my biggest chance," said Grant, "and I'm going to take advantage of it." It is obvious to anyone who talks to him that the Mexican City assignment by no means fulfills Bitsy's tennis ambitions. It's his intention to perform so brilliantly in the Mexican capital that the pickers won't be able to leave him off the squad picked for overseas duty.

Some Nice Wins

Among his souvenirs of early 1935 competition are the following feats:

Won Miami-Biltmore tourney, defeating Berkeley Bell, No. 7, and Sidney Wood, No. 2, both in straight sets.

Won Bermuda tourney, whipping Gilbert Hall in final.

Won River Oaks meet at Houston, Tex., beating Bell again and Wilmer Allison, nation's No. 1 ranker.

"I'm keeping in better condition and training harder than I ever have before," says Bitsy. But the critics point out also that he's playing a more aggressive game, going to the net far oftener than formerly, volleying better—and his temperament has improved.

The tennis fan, mindful of Grant's well-known preference for clay courts, may ask what he could do on grass courts, provided his Mexico City showing warranted further duty. He's beaten some of the best on grass surfaces, notably beating Wood at Seabright in 1932 and being runner-up at Seabright and Southampton in 1934. He trimmed Ellsworth Vines in the 1932 nationals.

Won Southern Title at 16

Seven times Grant has been Southern champion, and he now holds the national clay court title for the second time. He races, slides, leaps and falls, but more often than not retrieves the ball.

On turf he can't do this so well, and since court-covering is his greatest asset he's handicapped. There are few grass courts in south for him to practice on.

Bitsy, not yet 25, won his first Southern title in 1927. He's been knocking off top-notchers ever since, but has never earned a rating than No. 7 nationally. He's No. 10 on the 1934 list.

Rookie Makes Good

The first outstanding pitching feat of the 1935 major league season goes to the credit of a rookie, Darrell (Cy) Blanton, strikeout king of the International League, who went to Pittsburgh last season just in time for one losing appearance.

Making his second major league start yesterday, the 27-year-old right-hander from Waurika, Okla., started throwing his fast one past the world-champion St. Louis Cardinals the way he used to do it for Albany when he once fanned 20 rivals in one game.

He faced only 31 batsmen, granted only one puny hit—a single by Spud Davis in the second inning—let only four runners reach first and none third, struck out six batters and wound up with a 3 to 0 triumph.

One burst of base hits in the third brought all the Pirate runs as Cookie Lavagetto, Tom Padden, Paul Waner, Babe Herman and Arky Vaughan all connected for singles off Bill Hallahan.

Johnson Shuts Out Cubs

Other pitchers besides Blanton also performed brilliantly yesterday. Silas Johnson, who was charged with 22 Cincinnati defeats last season, shut out the Cubs 4 to 0 for the Reds' third straight triumph.

John Whitehead, a "freshman" from Dallas, outpointed the veteran Fred Marberry on the hill, limiting the Detroit Tigers to six hits to give Chicago's White Sox a 3 to 2 triumph, and Lefty Grove, the lanky "if" man of the Red Sox, chalked up a victory in his first start although he was taken out for a pinch hitter in the seventh when Boston scored six of the runs that brought a 10 to 4 triumph over Washington.

Clark, Babich Win

Lefty Watson Clark, and Johnny Babich of Brooklyn also shared in hurling honors. Each won a 4 to 2 victory over the Braves in the patriots' day doubleheader. Clark also drove in two runs. Babich, who fanned Babe Ruth three times, got the benefit of Danny Taylor's first-inning homer which, with the bases full, provided all the Dodgers' afternoon runs.

Philadelphia teams took most of the headlines for hitting. Led by Dolph Camilli, who banged out two homers for a total of four in two days and knocked in seven runs, the Phillies hammered out 23 hits and an 18 to 7 victory over the Giants.

A's Trim Yanks

The Athletics took the home run route to a 6 to 5 victory over the Yankees that completely ruined Pat Malone's American League debut. Bob Johnson duplicated Taylor's feat of hitting a homer with three on base after Wally Moses had walloped Malone's second pitch for the full distance.

CLOSE PLAY—BUT NOT QUITE

Joe Medwick came home with a spectacular slide in the St. Louis Cardinals' game with the Chicago Cubs at Chicago, but he didn't quite make the grade. He was called out then, but he made up for it by smacking out a homer to give his team a 1-0 decision over the Cubs. (Associated Press Photo)

Rochester Duo Holds The Bowling Doubles

Rochester, N. Y., April 20 (AP).—With Tony Buonomo and Emmett Carroll bowling for a 478 count in the last game, the Rochester duo today held the doubles event of the New York state bowling tournament. Their total of 1182 displaced the Olean team of F. Mozak and C. Carlson.

Two changes were recorded in the five-man event with the Haubner and Stallknechts of Rochester toppling a total of 2958 pins in the final squad last night for fifth place and the Albions of Albion rolling 2853 in the early squad for eighth.

Today singles and doubles rolling are listed to start at 3 p. m. with eight duos scheduled and 16 singles. At 8:30 p. m., 12 five-man teams will roll.

Christ of the Andes Is Most Unusual Monument

The Christ of the Andes is one of the most unusual monuments in the world. It stands at Cambre pass, the highest accessible point on the Chile-Argentina boundary in the Andes mountains in South America. In 1902 Chile and Argentina had a dispute over their boundary line. Through the efforts of the clergy and the women of the two countries involved the dispute was settled by arbitration and the money which was on hand to use for preparations for the war was used for internal improvements.

Under the leadership of Senora Angela de Costa, of Argentina, the women of the two countries raised the money for the erection of a large statue of the Christ in 1904. The bronze used was that of old cannon which had been taken from Spain in time of war. The statue is 26 feet high and is mounted on a granite pillar. A tablet on the base is inscribed: "Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than Argentines and Chileans break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ the Redeemer."

Detective, Investigator

A detective, in the proper sense of the word, traces crime or obtains secret information for the detection of crime. His occupation is directly in connection with infractions of law. On the other hand, an investigator, as the term is ordinarily employed, is one who is occupied in the field of research, generally scientific; one who is engaged in seeking facts. A legislative inquiry into certain facts may be conducted by an investigator, and the inquiry may lead to the detection of infractions of law. In such an instance the work of an investigator and that of a detective might be along identical channels, but it is an incidental channel for the investigator, and the occupational channel for the detective.—Literary Digest.

Windsor Chair Is Rich in History and Romance

With Philadelphia as the first home of an imported Windsor chair, the vogue soon gathered momentum, travelling northward through the New England states, each state having its own cabinet-makers who figured out different details which gave its chairs definite earmarks of identification. And it is said that when an unusually fine Windsor chair was discovered in the South that it was found to have been made either in the North and sent there or that there was a Northern cabinet-maker who had designed and built it in the South.

George III (1760-1820) was said to have been attracted to the Windsor chair one afternoon when he dropped into an English cottage, and thereafter made it a popular piece; but so closely is it connected with important men in United States history that it really means a great deal to us.

For instance, the first draft of the Declaration of Independence was written by Thomas Jefferson while sitting in a Windsor writing chair (said to be great, great-grandfather to our one-armed lunch chairs); and from Windsor chairs every signer of that Declaration rose to perform his duty.

Several kinds of wood were put in one chair, and this made no difference because originally these were painted. For the seat pine or whitewood was used and birch, hickory, chestnut, maple and ash were used for the stretchers and spindles, these being put in position when they were green, thus allowing them to season in place, which was said to make the joints firmer.—Detroit News.

Maidens Sacrificed to the Indian God of War

Human sacrifice to the gods of war may have been widely diffused in North America. Dr. Truman Michelson of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution, has gathered considerable evidence, linguistic and otherwise, that a practice supposedly confined to the Aztecs and to the "Morning Star" rites of the Pawnee may have extended over the eastern part of the continent.

In the Mexican practice the heart of the victim was cut out with a stone knife. The Pawnee ceremony entailed the sacrifice of a maiden.

Doctor Michelson finds the Ojibwa had a specific word, agonakwe, which was translated as "a virgin whom pagan Indians place on an elevated scaffold in order to obtain success in war." The word, Doctor Michelson finds, can be traced back to two roots which would mean "hanging a woman."

From the vague references of the missionary journals, it appears that the Hurons burned a maiden at the stake on an elevated platform. It was a sacrifice quite different in principle from the burning of prisoners of war at the stake. Because it attracted so little attention a deduction might be drawn that the ceremony seldom was practiced, or may even have evolved into the symbolic burning of the figure of a maiden before any white men came in contact with it.

Stocks Still Stand

Visitors to England passing through the village of Albury, Hertfordshire, a few miles from London, may see the old village stocks where vagrants, trespassers, poachers and ne'er-do-wells had their ankles pinioned in a pair of notched planks. Several could be dealt this cruel type of justice at one time.

Temperature of Ionized Atmosphere

Experiments give further proofs that the layers of ionized atmosphere of the earth from 62 to 124 miles above sea level have a fairly constant temperature regardless of the time of day, night or season.

High School News

Presents One-Act Play.

On Monday morning, during the first period, Miss Tarrant's dramatics class presented a short one-act play, Eugene Pellot's "Two Crooks and a Lady." About 200 students enjoyed the presentation. The cast included Mary McManus, who played the part of a wealthy invalid, who possessed a very valuable and famous necklace; Alma Cross, her maid, who conspired with a young good-for-nothing, played by James Martin, to steal the necklace; the secretary and companion, Ruth Koonz; and Donald Finley and Jack Sharot, two plain clothes policemen.

The dramatic course is a new addition to the high school's curriculum, and its continuance as a permanent class depends upon this term's results. The play presented Monday was the first of three which the class is planning to give during the remainder of the term. The purpose of the class is to teach the fundamentals of acting and a better understanding of the drama, anad with these, a clearer understanding of human nature and cooordination between mind and body.

Art Class Visits Petershams.

Recently several students in the art classes visited the studio of Maude and Miska Petersham in Woodstock. Mr. and Mrs. Petersham are well known as authors and illustrators of many books primarily for children, as well as the illustrators of several magazine stories. Sketches made in Holland and France and other places which the Petershams have visited were shown the guests, who were also interested in a collection of unusual toys from many different countries, which they have acquired in traveling.

The novel design of the studio itself delighted the students, who made the trip. Those who were in the party were Marcia Brown, Mary Davis, Virginia Witte, Dorothea Connolly, Ruth Koonz, Donald Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Hoderath, Miss Fuller, Miss Smith and Mr. Kurtsznacker.

Life Insurance Talk.

The Economic Citizenship class, a new addition to the course of study, was addressed by a representative of a leading insurance firm, who impressed upon them the value and advantages of life insurance.

Mr. Tremper spoke on the many benefits of modern civilization which make life easier and safer for us, in which he included life insurance. He compared life insurance with various other means of investing one's money, and pointed out that life insurance brings sure returns, is of constant value, and does not depend upon changing values such as a real estate investment does.

A number of diagrams were exhibited which bore out Mr. Tremper's statements on the soundness and stability of life insurance, and he closed by summarizing the financial problems which life insurance could serve as a means of financing.

Films of College Activities

Recently Miss Doris Crockett, secretary of registration of Russell Sage College, Troy, spoke to several Kingston High School upperclass girls on the college. Miss Crockett had some films with her which were taken at the college, showing several aspects of college life. Recreational activities, several classes in progress, the physics, science, and homemaking departments with students at work, and views of the college buildings were all shown, giving the girls a clear first-hand picture of life at Russell Sage. Principal Clarence Dumm expressed his satisfaction of this method as valuable in giving high school students an intimate glimpse of college life.

Newton Club Sees Films

On Wednesday afternoon, directly after the close of school, the Newton Science Club of the high school saw a two-reel moving picture on the subject "Power", which had been prepared by a leading electrical power company. The films were shown on the curtained stage, in order to secure sufficient darkness, by Mr. Dumm, who used his own projector.

The film opened with a review of inventions of the past century, which made possible our modern applications of power, the transmission of power, and its widespread use and production. The evolution of steam engines was depicted by means of pictures and diagrams, as well as the development of the induction principle of electricity by Faraday, which lead to the modern alternating current generator. The animated diagrams which illustrated this and other machines were so clear and simple that, even to the novice, the principle and construction of each were readily understandable.

Diagrams and pictures of the steam and water-power turbines which are used to drive generators were likewise shown and explained. Pictorial graphs were shown which impressed upon the students the remarkable advances made in efficiency of production and transmission of electricity, as well as the great increase in the use of electricity. The main source of coal supply and water power throughout the country were represented on maps, and the amount of each utilized during a year was illustrated by pictorial comparisons, such as the building of a wall of coal, equal to the Great Wall of China in dimensions, entirely around the United States. In closing, some of the huge power plants of the country were shown in airplane views.

Debate With St. Lawrence

On Thursday, April 25, the St. Lawrence University Freshman debating team will meet a two-man team from Kingston High School. The debate will be held in one of the high school study halls, either in the afternoon or morning. The definite time will be announced later. A judge will be secured who will announce before the debate the points on which he will base his decision, and who will give a thorough criticism of the debate afterward in justification of his decision. The increased length of the speeches, the fact that only two make up each team, and the criticism by one judge instead of the usual balloting by three, make this debate quite different in form from the usual high school debate.

St. Lawrence University's team intends to enter intercollegiate competition in New York, and, as Kingston is on their route, wrote to the high school asking for a debate. The university team represents the highest caliber competition which the local squad has met in recent years. The topic is "Federal Aid to Education," with Kingston upholding the affirmatice side of the argument.

Social Science Trip

On Saturday, May 4, the Social Science Club has planned to make a trip to Albany, to make a tour of the points of interest. Highlights of the trip will be visits to the capitol, the New York state office building, and the state educational building. Some free time will be allowed the students to do whatever they may please. The committee in charge of the trip are Genevieve Everett, Herbert Greenwald and Frank Schilling.

TB Committee Letter

The latest issue of the school paper, "Dame Rumor," carried a letter from the Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis, which urged the students' help in its prevention, pointed out the symptoms of tuberculosis, the need for early attention, and several methods used to cure it.

Chess Team Wins

Kingston High School's chess team recently met and defeated Saugerties High School, 6-2. A mass tournament, with ten players to a side will be held with Saugerties in the future. Kingston's representatives are Alton Thorpe, William Stall, Norman Rafalowski, Leonard Davis and Bert Pettinger.

Public Speaking Programs

On Wednesday, April 17, the three public speaking begin classes exchanged speakers and each was entertained by several members of the other two classes, who gave five-minute speeches, largely on their own personal experiences. The talks ranged from the serious to the humorous or imaginative, and covered experiences in other countries as well as in several different parts of our own country. James Every amused the classes with an imaginative picture of himself as a successful man of 35; David Fennington gave a few highlights of "Count Luckner, The Sea Devil"; Beverly Berman spoke on the life of the Russian dancer, Lejbinski; Don McCausland spoke on "Individuality"; Robert Brown gave an account of a trip to Reno, Nevada; Alton Thorpe described the habits and danger of the termite; Robert Van Kleeck imagined the happiest day in his life; William Israel reviewed the book, "Flushin"; Shirley Stuart gave a travelogue of Egypt; Mildred Shultis told of a parachute jump which turned into a dream, while Norman Rafalowski dreamed of a very realistic kidnaping; Doris Wirem told of her trip last summer with Tom Mix's circus; Harold Weston defended the scenic beauties of New York state as the most beautiful in the country; Nancy Hutty described a recent tour of New York's famous 42nd street; Orlando Ingalls told entertainingly of his first airplane solo flight; Ben Toffel recalled the time "when I nearly lost my life" in a manner that produced roars of laughter.

Hi-Y Meeting

On Tuesday evening, April 15, the Alpha Chapter of Hi-Y were the guests of the Lambda Chapter in their regular Tuesday evening meeting. About 20 members of both chapters attended the meeting. The feature of the evening was a discussion of the recent student peace demonstrations, during which it was estimated 15,000 students laid down their books in a nationwide "peace strike." Several new members received the induction ceremony which made them full-fledged members. Following the meeting the clubs took to the gym floor for several basketball games.

Annual Ball of Excelsior Hose

The annual ball under the auspices of Excelsior Hose Fire Company will be held in Huling's Barn, across the Washington avenue viaduct, Monday evening, April 29, with Cy Austin and his band furnishing the music for dancing and a floor show that promises to outdo anything seen around these parts in a long time.

A committee from Excelsior has been busy arranging for the ball and indications are that their efforts will bring forth one of the crowning social events of the Easter season. The entertainment program will consist of four acts, featuring performers who are advertised as "all headliners". The acts will be announced later.

Monday night at 8 o'clock there will be a special meeting of the Hose Company at the engine house on Hurley avenue. The floor committee will be appointed and other arrangements completed. Following the meeting there will be refreshments. All members are urged to attend.
